HALL'S DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL

Coroner in Verdict Found That he
Was Killed While Trespassing
on Railroad

RUMORS WERE UNFOUNDED

Testimony of Girl Showed That he
Left Her Home at Eleven O'clock
Instead of Nine O'clock

Coroner Barnett was unable to find any grounds for rumors of foul play in the death of Charles Hall, of near Milroy, whose mangled remains were found along the Big Four tracks, two miles south of Milroy last Friday morning.

The coroner filed his verdict this afternoon finding that he "came to his death on the morning of June 4 1915 at about 12:20 a. m. while he was trespassing along the right-of-way of the Big Four railroad at a point 150 feet north of 'Foley's Crossing,' two miles south of Milroy and one mile north of Williams-town. Death was due to being struck by a Big Four freight train No. 95 and was accidental."

It will be recalled that following the finding of Hall's body rumors were thick in Milroy that the death was not altogether accidental and an effort was made to create a mystery. The coroner states in his verdict that death was accidental and finds no grounds for suspicion.

Hall had been to see Miss Roxie Fishback at Williamstown and it was first reported that he had left there about nine o'clock. The watch found on his person had stopped at 1:35 o'clock and as there were several hours that could not be accounted for, rumors of foul play started.

According to the testimony of Miss Fishback, Hall did not leave there until 11 o'clock on the night of June 3, instead of nine o'clock as had been rumored. She told the coroner that he came there about four-thirty o'clock in the evening and remained until eleven o'clock that night. She also stated that she had been with young Hall while he was under the influence of liquor and it was not generally known around Milroy that he ever drank.

GEN. TRABUE WILL CANVAS THE VOTE

Election of Brigadier General Will Take Place on June 15, According to Orders.

GRAY IS AGAIN A CANDIDATE

General Samuel L. Trabue of this city, Col. Harry Wade and Frank Shellhouse of Indianapolis have been appointed as members of the canvassing board to canvass the vote on the election of brigadier General, commanding the Indiana brigade of the Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias.

The commission of General William B. Gray, of Covington, has expired by limitation and General G. H. Loomis of Grand Rapids, Mich., has ordered an election to be held on June 15. The vote will be taken by mail and the time limit is June 15. It is expected that Gen. Gray will be re-elected as there appears to be no opposition to his candidacy.

IT COMES HIGHER HERE

Greensburg News Comments on Newspaper Contests.

Commenting on the recent law suit brought against the owner of the Rushville American and comparing it with a similar transaction in Greensburg, the Greensburg News says:

Rushville seems to be higher priced for winning prizes in newspaper voting contests than Greensburg. The complaint filed in the Rushville American contest alleges that the winner gave a check for $75. One put on here in which a suit was threatened, but compromised, the check was said to be only for $65, so they come $10 higher in Rush.

NEWMAN BOY SENT TO PLAINFIELD

Entered Plea of Guilty to Burglary
Charge And Sentenced to
Boys' School

BROKE INTO WILSON STORE

Sheriff Cavitt left this morning for Plainfield with Guy Newman, 14 years old, son of John Newman, who was found in the Frank Wilson clothing store late Sunday afternoon.

Young Newman was arraigned before Judge Sparks late yesterday and entered a plea of guilty to the charge of burglary and was immediately sentenced by the court. The case did not go through the regular channels of the juvenile court by reason of the fact that the boy pleaded guilty and this was not necessary. Judge Sparks sent him to the boys school at Plainfield to remain until he was twenty-one years old or until further order of the court. Young Newman took his sentence in an easy manner and said that since he was guilty he was anxious to begin the sentence.

950 LEFT HERE ON EXCURSION TRAIN

Attendance Alone Should Make
Picnic at Cincinnati Zoo a
Success—Eleven Coaches.

WILL MEET WINCHESTER, KY.

As far as crowd is concerned the picnic of the Main Street Christian church Sunday school and the Winchester, Ky., Sunday school at the Zoo in Cincinnati today should be a great success. A total of 950 tickets were sold for the excursion train that left here this morning at seven o'clock. The train was packed to the guards, and the eleven cars were all filled.

The number making the trip came up to the expectations of the committee in charge. Of the 950 making the trip many were from the country and began arriving here at an early hour this morning. The special train from Winchester will arrive at about the same hour and all who intended going to the zoo would find sufficient cars awaiting at the depots.

CASEY PAROLE RECEIVED HERE

But he is Still in Jail Because Court
is Out of City—Associating
Charge Not Mentioned.

SOME MISUNDERSTANDING

Governor Does Not Take This Into Consideration and he May Have to Serve More Time.

Newton Casey, who was yesterday paroled by Governor Ralston, acting on a petition filed there, was still in jail today because Judge Sparks was out of the city. The parole is in the hands of Clerk Taylor and it is expected Casey will be released tomorrow after being arraigned before the court and the provisions of the parole read to him. The parole is very strict and Casey will have to lead the "straight and narrow" if he is to escape serving the remainder of the sentence.

The parole of the governor does not exactly correspond with the petition as sent in. The order does not mention a thing about the associating charge against Casey and the figures of the jail sentence do not correspond with those given on the criminal docket. He was fined $290 and given 110 days in jail on the blind tiger charge and $90 fine and 60 days in jail for associating. According to the parole Casey has served 85 days in jail and this would not cover the fine and costs on either of the charges. The governor also states that Hon. Will M. Sparks signed the petition, which Judge Sparks did not do. The court recommended that if he was going to be turned out of jail that he be given a parole so that he would have some strings to him. The order of the governor is not altogether clear here.

The order of the governor is as follows:

Whereas—One Newton Casey was convicted in the circuit court of Rush county, Indiana, on the charge of selling intoxicating liquor without a license and sentenced to a term of 120 days in jail to which was added a fine of $380 and costs and,

Whereas, It is made to appear that said Newton Casey has served 85 days of said sentence; and,

Whereas, It is further made to appear by written report of examination by Drs. H. V. Logan, J. T. Paxton and Lowell M. Green, reputable physicians of Rush county, Indiana, that said Newton Casey is suffering from an injury, at which time some ribs were broken and also the ankle joint, and that lack of exercise and the confinement in his present condition will likely cause him to become a permanent cripple; and,

Whereas, It is further made to appear that said Casey has no means with which to pay said fine, and has two small children dependent upon him for support, and,

Whereas, Hon. Will M. Sparks, the trial judge, Hon. Albert C. Stevens, the prosecuting attorney, the auditor, the treasurer and county attorney of said county together with the physicians above mentioned and the Hon. James E. Watson and Charles A. Frazee of Rush county recommend that said fine be remitted and said Casey be granted a parole;

Now therefore I Samuel L. Ralston, governor of the state of Indiana by virtue of the power and authority invested in me by the constitution and laws of said state hereby remit said fine assessed against said Newton Casey grant him a parole, upon condition that he

JUST BACK FROM BATTLE FIELDS

Peter MacQueen, Noted Lecturer,
Coming to Chautauqua, Will Give
First Hand War Information.

HE IS A NOTED TRAVELER

First Went to War Zone in 1914 and
Joined Allies Army and Witnessed Many Conflicts.

First hand information of the European war may be obtained by patrons of the Rush county chautauqua, when it is held here in August, from the lips of Peter MacQueen, F. R. G. S., who will present "Travelogues in Color" on "The Great European War" and "The New South America."

Mr. MacQueen sailed in August, 1914, to represent Leslie's Weekly and other journals in the war territory. He came back to the United States during the last winter, but he returned last spring to gain more information of the great struggle and to take some actual scenes of the mammoth conflict.

On his first trip, Mr. MacQueen joined the army of the allies. He has had many war experiences, but these new ones have been by far the most thrilling and terrible. "Words," he writes, "fail to give the remotest idea of the wickedness and wasteful terror that today deluge the green fields of Europe in rivers of fratricidal blood."

He has made pictures on the battlefields and amid the red ruins of the villages and towns of Belgium, France and Germany. In addition to his own pictures there will also be included in this lecture, pictures made by other war correspondents and the well known and daring photographers, Underwood and Underwood.

No other man in America has the peculiar qualifications of Mr. MacQueen to see and describe this nightmare of horror—this theatre and museum of things magnificent and grand, called the "Great European War." Mr. MacQueen will discuss the causes, conditions and consequences of this most stupendous war in history.

Peter MacQueen has traveled in many lands and is counted the man of most familiar with a greater number of countries than any other explorer of note. He has a lecture on "The New South America," which consists of one hundred and fifty beautiful scenes from Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Rio Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Santiago and Valparaiso.

He also has a comprehensive illustrated lecture on "Mexico, Past and Present," and one on "The A. B. C. Republics of South America." Mr. MacQueen, in addition, has views of the Panama canal and the exposition and a lecture, illustrated, on "In Wildest Africa."

Loredo, Texas, June 8.—The first sign of Mexican dissatisfaction with President Wilson's new Mexico policy cropped out at Nuevo Loredo last night during a jubilation of Carranzistas over the Leon victory.

"Mexico for Mexicans," shouted one of the military leaders at the end of a speech.

"President Wilson's policies are not needed in Mexico. Carranza is able to handle the Mexican affairs."

The crowd greeted the remarks with wild cheers. Other speakers followed in a similar vein.

MAPLE-JOHNSON SUIT HEARD TODAY

Case Involving $45 Tried For
Second Time Before A. J. Ross
And a Jury in Circuit Court

DISAGREEMENT FIRST TIME

The account suit of Clell Maple against Lafayette Johnson, in which $45 is demanded, was being tried for the second time today in the circuit court. A. J. Ross, of Andersonville presided as judge and the case was heard by a jury. The first time the jury failed to agree.

The defense started introducing evidence this afternoon after the court had overruled a motion for the verdict for the defendant. Maple alleges that Johnson owes him $45 for training a horse. The costs in the suit are already greater than the amount demanded.

The jury was as follows: W. P. King, Jesse P. Bales, Willard Myers, Claude Guffin, Charles E. Hall, A. M. Hodge, Dan Kinney, D. C. Aldridge, Lewis Hendrix, J. E. Wynn, William Fisher and C. M. Wagoner.

CABINET NOT UNANIMOUS

Secretary Bryan Determined to Fight
for Modification of U. S. Note to Germany.

IT WILL BE SENT TOMORROW

If he Should Refuse to Sign it, His Retirement from Cabinet Seems
Very Certain.

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN.
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, June 8.—President Wilson caused the announcement at 1:15 this afternoon that the German note was not complete. Through Secretary Tammly he let it be known that he hoped it would go forward tomorrow.

But his cabinet was not unanimous in its approval of the document. And the man whose name it will bear, Secretary of State Bryan, left the cabinet meeting determined to fight for a modification right up to the very last minute.

Bryan believes the United States is so firmly on record for arbitration as to make it a mockery to send Germany a document which savors of an ultimatum. Although the majority of the cabinet was against him today, he carried his persuasive powers from the cabinet meeting to the University club, where he and his fellow members had lunch.

The white house announcement given by Secretary Tammly was as follows:

"The president asks me to say that the note was gone over and discussed and put in final shape and it is hoped that it will go forward tomorrow."

The Bryan position came as a complete surprise to the president. In previous notes the secretary has taken the position that the United States should invite arbitration. But in every instance he has stopped short of any further fight when the note had been approved by a majority of the cabinet. The president expected that he would do this today. Prior to the cabinet meeting it was understood from the president that the note would have the approval of all the members.

The first intimation that anything was wrong came when Bryan did not appear at the opening of the meeting. Inquiry at the White House disclosed that he had sent word that he was working over an important paper which had to be finished.

The secretary's messenger said Bryan would be busy for some time and could not come when the meeting opened.

Finally about twelve o'clock the secretary appeared. His face was

From Luxury to Necessity

A few years ago the automobile was a high priced luxury.

Today it is almost a necessity.

For the heavy work it is supplanting the horse. For quick travel it is supreme.

The automobile has a distinct service to render, but it would have never reached its present point of popularity under its own power.

Automobile manufacturers coupled up their product to the vigorous engine of newspaper advertising.

And as always happens the consumer quickly benefited, for as the uses of the automobile enlarged its cost decreased.

TODAY'S ODDEST STORY.

(By United Press.)

Okmulgee, Okl., June 8.—She was fair and good to behold. John Davenport, out of town traveling man, gazed upon her admiringly as she tripped along the street. "Ah there, little one," murmured the knight of the grip in his best tones. But she heeded not. Undaunted, John followed her, got her street number and then found her phone number. Thereupon he called the house. "Say, I'm that cute little fellow you passed a while ago—brown suit, gray cap and—." Bang went the receiver, but John persisted, until the fair one agreed he might drop around this afternoon. He did. Inside the house, he was confronted by a heavy man with a heavy voice. John's done with flirting.

by the coroner is testimony from Dr. C. S. Houghland, Ira Fleetwood, M. J. Luty, William Hall the boy's father and a number of others. Mr. Hall told the coroner that he had not had any trouble with his son although he did object to the company he was keeping. Several witnesses stated that they had never heard of young Hall contemplating suicide and Coroner Barnett reached the decision that death was accidental.

CABINET NOT UNANIMOUS

fleshed and his mouth set in a firm line. He swung into the cabinet room with a set stride of determination. For an hour the doors were closed then they opened with a bang. The cabinet members walked out but refused absolutely to talk. Secretary Bryan came last, his face still set, and beads of perspiration shown and his collar was wilted.

It is understood Bryan carried to the meeting a memorandum by which he justified his views that the proposed note was not of the character the United States should present.

Although Secretary Bryan will continue his efforts to obtain a modification of the note, those close to the president said they will be un-availing.

Should Bryan refuse to sign the note, it was admitted his retirement from the cabinet would be certain.

President Wilson this morning denied that any friction had occurred in the cabinet over the note although he said that all the members had made suggestions. He added, however, that he was satisfied that all including Secretary Bryan would be in accord when the note was finished.

On opening the box it was found to contain six bottles of a new patent fire extinguisher.—Argonaut.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush the Kidneys at once when Back-achy or Bladder bothers—Meat forms uric acid.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then get fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

Others to Follow Toner.

It is understood that the selection of a "former Democrat" to succeed E. C. Toner, of Anderson, who recently resigned as chairman of what little is left of the Progressive state organization to join the Republican party, is not in the least displeasing to Tom Taggart and his political associates and schemers. However, this choice it is said, is not meeting with the approval of thousands of men who believe in a protective tariff who voted the Progressive ticket last year. The rush towards the Republican camp since the state chairman of the Progressive party resigned to become a Republican has been terrific. Other men who were prominent in the Progressive movement as late as last year, it is reported, are preparing to follow the lead of the state chairman and state secretary at an early date.

The Vigo County Colored Republican Club is preparing to hold a big demonstration in Terre Haute on June 22. The officers have secured the use of the armory, one of the largest auditoriums in Terre Haute for this meeting. Special invitations are being sent out to every candidate for a place on the Republican ticket next year to be present. This club is one of the most active Republican organizations in the state. Additions to its membership list are being made daily. The club has opened permanent headquarters and regular meetings are held on Friday night of each week.

The Delaware County Republican Club will hold a smoker at headquarters in Muncie on June 17, at which time the new officers chosen recently at the annual meeting of the club will be installed. United States Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman of Illinois will be the principal speaker.

Obituary.

Lena Ray Brookbank, daughter of Harrison and Rose Brookbank was born in Orange township Rush County Indiana June 2 1882. She united with the M. E. Church at Gowdy in early life under the preaching of the Rev. Maupin. As she grew older she became stronger in the work and leaves a christian life on the pages of time.

She began teaching school when nineteen years of age in Orange township where she has taught for thirteen years. She was primary teacher at Moseow for nine years. The last day of her last school March 12th was the first day of her sickness from which she suffered much. During these long weeks of suffering she was tenderly and carefully attended by her mother and loving sisters and a faithful physician, but every possible means within the reach of human hands could not restore her health. She realized her condition and made all alized her condition and made all the necessary arrangements. She quietly passed away May, 24 aged 32 years, 11 months and 22 days. She leaves her mother, five sisters Mrs. J. T. Snull, Mrs. D. O. Alter, Mrs. James McDonald, and Miss Pearle, and one brother Ira, two half sisters Mrs. Frances Bennett, of Kokomo, and Mrs. Lewis Stark to mourn the irretrievable loss of an obedient daughter and loving sister, and a host of other relatives and friends who feel they have lost a dear one. Her kind words and winning smiles made many and lasting friendships.

Lena will be greatly missed in the schoolroom as in her home. Through all her pain at times she'd smile

A smile of heavenly birth
And when the angels called her home

She smiled farewell to earth
Heaven retaineth now our treasure,

Earth the lonely casket keeps
And the sunbeams love to linger

Where our loving sister sleeps
Tis' hard to break the tender cord

When love has bound the heart
Tis' hard, so hard, to speak the words,

We must forever part
Dearest loved one we must lay thee

In the peaceful grave's embrace
But thy memory shall be cherished

Until we see thy heavenly face

HEADING THE PROCESSION ON MEMORIAL DAY

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure
Newspaper Syndicate.

It was about a week before Memorial day a few years ago that one Horatio Sparrow, a resident of the village of Okemos, entered the drug store in that burg looking as if he had something serious on his mind, and on being encouraged a little he said to the druggist:

"Doc, don't say nothin' to a livin' soul, but the town of Okemos is to be jarred from center to circumference this evenin'!"

"In what way?" was asked.
"Never you mind, but be at the post-office at 7 o'clock. Meanwhile get ready to feel the earth tremble!"

"Is it dynamite, Horatio?" was asked.

"You be there and see!"

Horatio was a man that never got excited when he woke up in the morning and found a cow in his garden, and the druggist felt quite sure he had something big on hand. He must have told about fifty other people what he told him, for there was a big crowd at the postoffice at 7 o'clock in the evening, and all expected to hear big news. Deacon Holden took charge of things, as usual, and as the crowd got impatient he said:

"It is understood, feller citizens, that Horatio Sparrow is goin' to launch a thunderbolt here tonight, and it is with more than ordinary interest that I call the meetin' to order. Stand out, Horatio, and let's hear all about it."

Horatio stood out. He looked pale, but determined. He'd been thinking for a week of what he was going to say, and he started off as smooth as grease:

"The drums are beatin' a wild alarm. There is a wavin' of flags, a marchin' of men and a wallin' of women and children. War is upon the land. The life of the nation is at stake."

"By John, but that's flow'ry language!" exclaimed the deacon.

"Anything more, Horatio?"

"I jest want to call your attention to the fact that Okemos has never had a Memorial day parade," replied the orator. "We hev never paraded and never decorated."

"By John, but that's a strong p'int!" shouted the deacon. "Hang me if Horatio ain't knockin' things edgewise. No, sir; we never had a parade nor decorated any graves, and we ought to be ashamed of ourselves. It is your suggestion that we celebrate the day this year, Horatio?"

"That's a p'int, deacon."

"And it's as strong as a log chain. Yes, sir; we'll celebrate the day, and in order to make it a howlin' success I'll agree to take charge of the parade."

"But I object to that," said Horatio. "Hevin' originated this idea, I think it's fur me to ride on horseback at the head of the procession."

There was a painful pause, and then Abner Jones, who was in fireman's uniform, jumped off the counter and said:

"There shouldn't be no jealousy about this thing. Horatio would look purty fine on his spotted horse, and the deacon would be no slouch in his cocked hat, but if there's to be any feelin' over it I'll take the job off their hands. As I'm foreman of the fire company, it comes in my line anyhow."

"I don't propose to give up my right for nobody," said Horatio.

"And I'm thinkin' I'm the man to boss things," added the deacon.

"It appears to me," said Silas Lapham as he stood up and rubbed his hands together, "that we are not workin' in complete harmony in this matter. It will be the event of the century. Let us sacrifice any selfish interests as individuals and work to make the affair a general success."

"That's powerful good advice," said the deacon as he rapped on the stove with his cane—"powerful good. I alius stand ready to sacrifice, and I hope the rest of you do. Any further p'int, Silas?"

"You can call it a p'int or not," said Silas, "but bein' there seems to be a controversy here I think it better be settled by selectin' me to boss things."

"I'll never surrender my rights!" said Horatio Sparrow.

"Nor me!" added Deacon Holden.

"Nor me!" yelled Abner Jones.

It was evident that the meeting was on the point of breaking up in a row when Joe Richard came sauntering in as calmly as could be. The deacon saw him and called out:

"Feller patriots, before this meetin' breaks up in a row that will send the price of Okemos real estate down 50 per cent and put our civilization back fifty years let's hear what Joe Richard has to say about it."

"What's the question?" asked Joe.

"About Memorial day. Shall we decorate?"

"Decorate what?"

"Why, the soldiers' graves."

"I don't see how you are goin' to do it," said Joe as he scratched his ear.

"So fur as I know or hev bin able to find out nobody from Okemos went to war. It therefore follers that no Okemos man was ever killed. It follers, ag'in, that you might look the graveyard over run a month and not find a soldier's grave to decorate. 'Pears to me that you had better git yer grave fast."

Two minutes later Joe was the only man left in the postoffice. It was as he had said—there was nothing to decorate, and all the blowing had been for nothing.

DECISION ADDS TO BLUNDERS

Another Act is Placed in "The Comedy of Errors" as Played by Democratic Administration

FAVORS FOREIGN INTEREST*Court of Custom Appeals Declares*Five Per Cent Clause Includes*All Vessels

Washington, D. C., June 8.—The Court of Customs Appeals has just added another act to the comedy of errors in which the Democratic administration takes the star part.

The Court has rendered an opinion on the construction of the provision in the Underwood tariff law intended to give a 5 per cent discount in custom duties on merchandise imported in American vessels and has virtually declared that the effect of the provision gives a wholesale discrimination in favor of ships of foreign countries.

In a recent article attention was directed to this classic blunder then pending before the Customs Court. The slovenly methods by which it was enacted were referred to, showing that the Democrats had a vague idea about aiding American shipping, adopted a vague method of extending such aid, and by careless guess work had shown that during the debate in Congress Republicans had given repeated warnings that, apart from its policy, the phraseology of the five per cent section was meaningless and should be corrected to accomplish its purpose.

The decision of the Court of Customs Appeals completely confirms these statements, and rubs it in by saying:

"The wisdom or expediency of the policy is a matter into which we may not inquire nor have we the right to suspend the operation of the statute because we may think its purpose is not adequately accomplished."

It will be recalled that the language of the five percent discount section provided that "nothing herein shall be so construed as to abrogate or in any manner impair or affect the provisions of our treaties with foreign nations."

It appears from the opinion of the Customs Court that there are at least 5,500 treaty nation vessels in the American foreign trade, and that there are not over fifty American vessels. As a "favor" to our own ships the Democratic Congress, according to this decision, gave an EQUAL BOUNTY to 5,500 competing foreign vessels.

In its decision the Court referred to statistics showing that the discount provision reduces duties 5 per cent upon considerably more than one-half of all our dutiable imports. After all its labored adjustment of tariff rates the Democrats, in this single paragraph proposing a five per cent discount, practically destroyed the effect of all preceding schedules, and in the same breath conferred upon foreign ships a valuable privilege intended only for our own ships.

In harmony with the decision of the court of Customs Appeals there will be a refund of customs duties estimated at from twelve million to fifteen million dollars. Who gets the benefit of this refund? Eventually by far the larger part of it will find its way into the coffers of foreign manufacturers.

Unless the United States Supreme Court reverses the decision of the Court of Customs Appeals, these millions of dollars must come out of a treasury already facing a huge deficit resulting from gross mismanagement by the present administration.

SERVICE

Of the three essentials—strength, organization and service—afforded to clients of this Bank, SERVICE is not the least important.

The Bank's entire organization is permeated with the spirit of service. It is not enough to accept and safeguard the banking and trust business of clients; every effort is put forth to be of additional active service, within the Bank's proper sphere.

For example, the Bank, if appointed custodian of securities, will as agent sign ownership certificates required by the Federal Income Tax Law, collect dividends and coupons promptly as they mature, and either credit or remit the proceeds to the client; and will promptly notify him should any "rights" or other subscription privileges attach to the securities held.

Another example, clients are welcome to the Bank's facilities for investment and for investigating and analyzing the value of securities.

Many other examples of special service to clients might be mentioned, all of which would help to explain the rapid and substantial growth of this Bank's business.

OPENING GAMES WERE ALL FAST

Article of Ball as Displayed in Start of Indiana League Surely Should Please

CINCINNATI HERE SUNDAY

Team That Beat Richmond in Twelve Innings Will be The Attraction Sunday.

If the class of ball as displayed in the Indiana State league Sunday can be taken as a criterion for the rest of the season the fans around the circuit will see some wonderful games. One twelve-inning game and one eleven-inning game is not so bad for a starter, and then Rushville's 3 to 1 victory over Connersville only added to the interest.

On next Sunday the league will be officially opened here. The Perkins-Campbell team under the leadership of Charles Becker, great favorite in the surrounding cities, will be the attraction. This is the team that defeated Richmond in 12 innings Sunday. From this the fans will see that the Rushers have no easy sailing and all of the games from now on will be hard ones.

The Rushville lineup appears to be all set for the rest of the season. Earl Hewitt, Rushville's great pitcher will be on the mound Sunday and the team behind him will be the same that defeated Connersville. The Rushers will exert themselves to the limit to maintain the lead in the league race and another great game is expected.

Since Sunday's win over Connersville, interest in the game here has been alive as it never was before and the possibilities of a championship team have aided in creating this interest as the fans have been shown that Rushville has a real ball team.

The club officials and Manager Davidson have always maintained that the team would travel behind good pitching and this has been proven. In Earl Hewitt the team has one of the best pitchers ever on the local field and the team behind him is giving the proper support.

Under the leadership of George Rohe the team is playing inside ball and will continue to do so. The league season here Sunday will be opened in an auspicious manner and one of the largest crowds of the season is expected as the interest is great and the fans are pulling for the team to stick in the lead in the league race.

There are several "ifs" connected with the game next Sunday that would put Rushville out in the lead all by its lonesome. The first one of these is, if Rushville beats Cincinnati. The second is for Connersville to beat Newcastle and the third for Cambridge City to beat Richmond. If all of this should happen then the Rushers would be in the lead with the rest trailing. It can be done as far as Rushville is concerned as the team is determined to win.

Rheumatism in Ankles

One Bottle of Rheuma Relieved Woman Who Could Not Walk.

Marvelous as this story may seem, it is absolutely true; but this is only one of the many almost magical cures that Rheuma is performing these days. Use of one bottle will convince any sufferer.

Mrs. Gertrude Kozel, Smithfield, Pa., writes: "I had rheumatism for over a year; it settled in my ankles and I could not walk. I have taken one bottle of Rheuma and do not have any more pain, and I can again walk at will."

Johnson's Drug Store and all druggists sell Rheuma for 50 cents. It is guaranteed to cure any case of any kind of rheumatism or money back.

Gratifying relief comes in a day, because Rheuma acts at one time on the kidneys, stomach, liver and blood, and starts to rid the entire system of poisonous uric acid at once.

PHILLIES STILL CLING AT TOP

Pat Moran's Team Causes Worry by Their Showing in the National League Race

NOT PROVING FLASH IN PAN

Great Brand of Hurling Has Proved Best Asset to Club—Infield Well Balanced.

BY BARRY FARIS
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

New York, June 8.—The dogged persistence with which Pat Moran's Phillies cling around the top of the National league is beginning to cause much worry in various other camps in President Tener's circuit. When the Quakertown crew got away in a mad rush at the opening of the season most of the "wise" ones laughed. "Just a flash," they said. "They won't stay up there long."

The flash, however hasn't shown many healthy signs of sputtering out. The Cubs spurred by them once in May for a short time, but Moran's men battered their way back again. The Cubs, by the way, on their first eastern invasion, cleaned up everywhere but at Philadelphia. The Phillies turned them back neatly in their efforts to dislodge the league leaders.

Fans are now giving the Quakertown crew a closer inspection than they have heretofore this season. Even yet the Phillies are not regarded seriously as pennant contenders. Few think that they have the stamina that will be required when the race gets hot in mid-summer. Charles Ebbetts, owners of the Dodgers, who are threatening the leaders this year, was quoted as saying that New York and Boston were the only teams his club had to beat out for the pennant. Roger Bresnahan, pilot of the Cubs, picked the same two as the ones he feared. Neither of these pilots took each other or the Phillies into consideration. As yet neither the Giants or the Braves have got to going.

The great brand of hurling that his club has been blessed with is the biggest factor in Moran's success. Grover Cleveland Alexander, sometimes known as Alexander the Great, has been exhibiting the best brand of twirling seen in either league this season. Always a great pitcher, he has outdone himself this season. He has had few off days and he has chalked up many victories.

Alexander hasn't been the only winning pitcher, however. Mayer has been traveling along at a clip only slightly slower. Chalmers, turned back by the Giants after the training season, has been going great guns. Al Demaree, the cartoonist-flinger, shows signs of repeating his good work with the Giants two years ago. The Phillies' infield is well balanced. Luderus at first and Bobby Byrne, ex-Pirate at third, are playing bang-up ball and steadying two younger players on the infield. Bert Neihoff, at second, has been playing ball a long time but has had little major league experience. This year he is rated high. Baneroff, at short, is playing sensational ball.

Dode Paskert, Beals Becker, and Gabby Cravath form the regular outer garden. All are slugging the ball. Cravath's home runs are almost a daily feature.

FRENCH MAKING STEADY ADVANCES

Germans Unsuccessful in Attempts to Check Them in Region Near The Arras

TRENCHES FILLED WITH DEAD

(By United Press.)

Paris, July 8.—Pressing steadily eastward towards Lens, the French have occupied another group of houses east of the Souchez sugar mill by daring bayonet dashes. Everywhere north of the region near the Arras the enemy are making unsuccessful attempts to stop the French advance.

An official statement issued from the war office this afternoon stated that the French had made slight progress on the slope of the Lorette. The Germans counter attacked three times during the night but were beaten off.

The fighting around Laville and the "labyrinth" is piling ruined trenches with dead and wounded.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

E. PHILIPS OPPENHEIM

Novelized from the Photo Play of the Same Name. Produced by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

The carriage drew up before the great front a moment or two later. Lord Ashleigh came forward with outstretched hands, the genial smile of the welcoming host upon his lips. In his manner, however, there was a distinct note of anxiety.

"Edgar, my dear fellow," he exclaimed, "I am delighted! Welcome back to your home! Mr. Quest, I am very happy to see you here. You have heard the news, of course?"

"We have heard nothing!" the professor replied.

"You didn't go to Scotland Yard?" Lord Ashleigh asked.

"We haven't been to London at all," Quest explained. "We got on the boat train at Plymouth, and your brother managed to induce one of the directors whom he saw on the platform to stop the train for us at Hamelin road. We only left the boat two hours ago. There's nothing wrong with Craig, is there?"

Lord Ashleigh motioned them to follow him.

"Please come this way," he invited. He led them across the hall—which, dimly lit and with its stained-glass windows, was almost like the nave of a cathedral—into the library beyond. He closed the door and turned around.

"I have bad news for you both," he announced. "Craig has escaped."

Neither the professor nor Quest betrayed any unusual surprise. So far as the latter was concerned, his first glimpse at Lord Ashleigh's face had warned him of what was coming.

"Dear me!" the professor murmured, sinking into an easy chair. "This is most unexpected!"

"We'll get him again," Quest declared quickly. "Can you let us have the particulars of his escape, Lord Ashleigh? The sooner we get the hang of things the better."

"You know, of course," he began, "that Craig was arrested at Liverpool in consequence of communications from the New York police. I understand that it was with great difficulty he was discovered, and it is quite clear that someone on the ship had been heavily bribed. However, he was arrested, brought to London, and then taken here for purposes of identification. I would have gone to London myself, and, in fact, offered to do so, but on the other hand, as there are many others on the estate to whom he belushes from a place a little farther behind those trees, then stepped boldly into the middle of the water, waded down to that spot where, as you see, the trees hang over, stood stock still and leaned them all around him. It was dusk when the chase reached the river bank, and I have no doubt the belushes presented quite a natural appearance. At any rate, although the dogs came without a check to the edge of the river, where he stepped off, they never picked the scent up again either on this side or the other. We tried them for four or five hours before we took them home. The next morning, while the place was being thoroughly searched, we came upon the spot where these belushes had been cut down, and we found them caught in the low boughs of a tree, drifting down the river."

Quest had lit a fresh cigar and was smoking vigorously.

"What astonishes me more than anything," he pronounced, as he stood looking over the desolate expanse of country, "is that when one comes face to face with the fellow he presents all the appearance of a nerveless and broken-down coward. Then all of a sudden there spring up these evidences of the most amazing, the most diabolical resource. . . . Who's this, Lord Ashleigh?"

The latter turned his head. An elderly man in a brown velvet suit, with gaiters and thick boots, raised his hat respectfully.

"This is my head keeper, Middleton," his master explained. "He was with us on the chase."

The professor shook hands heartily with the newcomer.

"Not a day older, Middleton!" he exclaimed. "So you are the man who has given us all this trouble, eh? This gentleman and I have come over from New York on purpose to lay hands on Craig."

"I am very sorry, sir," the man replied. "I wouldn't have fired my gun if I had known what the consequences were going to be, but them poaching devils that come round here rabbiting fairly send me furious, and that's a fact. It ain't that one grudge them a few rabbits, but my tame pheasants all run out here from the home wood, and I've seen feathers at the side of the road there that no fox nor stoat had nothing to do with. All the same, sir, I'm very sorry," he added, "to have been the cause of any inconvenience."

"It is rather worse than inconvenience, Middleton," the professor said, gravely. "The man who has escaped is one of the worst criminals of these days."

"He won't get far, sir," the gamekeeper remarked, with a little smile. "It's a wild bit of country, this, and I admit that men might search it for weeks without finding anything, but those gentlemen from Scotland Yard, sir, if you'll excuse my making the remark, and hoping that this gentleman," he added, looking at Quest, "is in no way connected with them—well, they don't know everything, and that's a fact."

"This gentleman is from the United States," Lord Ashleigh reminded him, "so your criticism doesn't affect him. By the bye, Middleton, I heard this morning that you'd been airing your opinion down in the village. You seem to rather fancy yourself as a thief-catcher."

"I wouldn't go so far as that, my lord," the man replied, respectfully, "but still, I hope I may say that I've as much common sense as most people. You see, sir," he went on, turning to Quest, "the spots where he could emerge from the tract of country are pretty well guarded, and he'll be in a fine mess, when he does put in an appearance, to show himself upon a public road. Yet by this time I should say he must be nigh starved. Sooner or later he'll have to come out for food. I've a little scheme of my own, sir, I don't mind admitting," the man concluded, with a twinkle in his keen brown eyes. "I'm not giving it away. If I catch him for you, that's all that's wanted, I imagine, and we shan't be any the nearer to it for letting anyone into my little secret."

His master nodded.

"You shall have your rise out of the police, if you can, Middleton," he observed. "It seems queer, though, to believe that the fellow's still in hiding round here."

They made their way, single file, to the road and up to the house. Lord Ashleigh did his best to dispel a queer little sensation of uneasiness which seemed to have arisen in the minds of all of them.

"Come," he said, "we must put aside our disappointment for the present, and remember that after all the chances are that Craig will never make his escape alive. Let us forget him for a little while. . . . Mr. Quest," he added, a few minutes later, as they reached the hall, "Moreton here will show you your room and look after you. Please let me know if you will take an aperitif. I can recommend my sherry. We dine at eight o'clock. Edgar, you know your way. The blue room, of course. I am coming up with you myself. Her ladyship back yet, Moreton?"

"Not yet, my lord."

"Lady Ashleigh," her husband explained, "has gone to the other side of the county to open a bazaar. She is looking forward to the pleasure of welcoming you at dinner time."

Dinner, served out of compliment to their transatlantic visitor, in the great banquet hall, was to Quest, especially, a most impressive meal. They sat at a small round table lit by shaded lights, in the center of an apartment which was large in reality, and which seemed vast by reason of

was well known, I thought that it would be better to have more evidence than mine alone. Accordingly, they left London one afternoon, and I sent a dogcart to the station to meet them. They arrived quite safely and started for here. Craig handcuffed to one of the Scotland Yard men on the back seat, and the other in front with the driver. About half a mile from the south entrance to the park the road runs across a rather desolate strip of country with a lot of low undergrowth on one side. We have had a little trouble with poachers there, as there is a sort of gypsy camp on some common land a little way away. My head keeper, to whom the very idea of a poacher is intolerable, was patrolling this ground himself that afternoon and caught sight of one of these gypsy fellows setting a trap. He chased him, and more, I am sure, to frighten him than anything else, when he saw that the fellow was getting away, he fired his gun, just as the dogcart was passing. The horse shied, the wheel caught a great stone by the side of the road, and all four men were thrown out. The man to whom Craig was handcuffed was stunned, but Craig member, no doubt, I have always kept a few bloodhounds in my kennels, and as soon as we could get together one or two of the keepers and a few of the local constabulary, we started off again from here. The dogs brought us without a check to this shed, and started off again this way."

They walked another half mile across a reedy swamp. Every now and then they had to jump across a small dyke, and once they had to make a detour to avoid an osier bed. They came at last to the river.

"Now, I can show you exactly how that fellow put us off the scent here," their guide proceeded. "He seems to have picked up something, Edgar, in those South American trips of yours, for a cleverer thing I never saw. You see all these belushes everywhere—clouds of them all along the river?"

"We call them tules," Quest muttered. "Well?"

"When Craig arrived here," Lord Ashleigh continued, "he must have heard the baying of the dogs in the distance and he knew that the game was up unless he could put them off the scent. He cut a quantity of these belushes from a place a little farther behind those trees, then stepped boldly into the middle of the water, waded down to that spot where, as you see, the trees hang over, stood stock still and leaned them all around him. It was dusk when the chase reached the river bank, and I have no doubt the belushes presented quite a natural appearance. Her ladyship back yet, Moreton?"

"Not yet, my lord."

"Lady Ashleigh," her husband explained, "has gone to the other side of the county to open a bazaar. She is looking forward to the pleasure of welcoming you at dinner time."

Dinner, served out of compliment to their transatlantic visitor, in the great banquet hall, was to Quest, especially, a most impressive meal. They sat at a small round table lit by shaded lights, in the center of an apartment which was large in reality, and which seemed vast by reason of the shadows which hovered around the unit spaces. From the walls frowned down a long succession of family portraits—Ashleighs in the queer Tudor costume of Henry VII; Ashleighs in chain armor, sword in hand, a charger waiting, regardless of perspective, in the near distance; Ashleighs befrilled and bewigged; Ashleighs in the court dress of the Georges—judges, sailors, statesmen and soldiers. A collection of armor which would have gladdened the eye of many an antiquarian, was ranged along the black-paneled walls. Everything was in harmony, even the grave precision of the solemn-faced butler and the powdered hair of the two footmen. Quest, perhaps for the first time in his life, felt almost lost, hopelessly out of touch with his surroundings, and a struggling figure. Nevertheless, he entertained the little party with many stories. He struggled all the time against that queer sense of anachronism which now and then became almost oppressive.

The professor's pleasure at finding himself once more amongst these familiar surroundings was obvious and intense. The conversation between him and his brother never flagged. There were tenants and neighbors to be asked after, matters concerning the estate on which he demanded information. Even the very servants' names he remembered.

"It was a queer turn of fate, George," he declared, as he held out before him a wonderfully chased glass filled with amber wine, "which sent you into the world a few seconds before me and made you lord of Ashleigh and me a struggling scientific man."

"The world has benefited by it," Lord Ashleigh remarked, with more than fraternal courtesy. "We hear great things of you over here, Edgar. We hear that you have been on the point of proving most unpleasant things with regard to our origin."

"Oh! there is no doubt about that," the professor observed. "Where we came from and where we are going to are questions which no longer afford room for the slightest doubt to the really scientific mind. What sometimes does elude us is the nature of our tendencies while we are here on earth."

There was a brief silence. The port had been placed upon the table and coffee served. The servants, according to the custom of the house, had departed. The great apartment was empty. Even Quest was impressed by some peculiar significance in the long-drawn-out silence. He looked around him uneasily. The growing regard of that long line of painted warriors seemed somehow to be full of menace. There was something grim, too, in the sight of those empty suits of armor.

"I may be superstitious," Lord Ashleigh said, "but there are times, especially just lately, when I seem to find a new and hateful quality in silence. What is it, I wonder? I ask you, but I think I know. It is the conviction that there is some alien presence, something disturbing, lurking close at hand."

He suddenly rose to his feet, pushed his chair back and walked to the window, which opened level with the ground. He threw it up and listened. The others came over and joined him. There was nothing to be heard but the distant hooting of an owl, and farther away the barking of some farmhouse dog. Lord Ashleigh stood there with straining eyes, gazing out across the park.

"There was something here," he muttered; "something which has gone. What's that? Quest, your eyes are younger than mine. Can you see anything underneath that tree?"

Quest peered out into the gray darkness.

"I fancied I saw something moving in the shadow of that oak," he muttered. "Wait."

He crossed the terrace, swung down on to the path, across the lawn, over a wire fence and into the park itself. All the time he kept his eyes fixed on a certain spot. When at last he reached the tree there was nothing there. He looked all around him. He stood and listened for several moments. A more utterly peaceful night or more utter peace it would be hard to imagine. Slowly he made his way back to the house.

"I imagine we are all a little nervy tonight," he remarked. "There's nothing doing out there."

They strolled about for a hour or more, looking into different rooms, showing their guest the finest pictures, even taking him down into the wonderful cellars. They parted early, but Quest stood, for a few moments before retiring, gazing about him with an air almost of awe. His great room, as large as an Italian palace, was lit by a dozen wax candles in silver candlesticks. His four-poster was supported by pillars of black oak carved into strange forms, and surmounted by the Ashleigh coronet and coat-of-arms. He threw his windows open wide and stood for a moment looking out across the park, more clearly visible now by the light of the slowly rising moon. There was scarcely a breeze stirring, scarcely a sound even from the animal world. Nevertheless, Quest, too, as reluctantly he made his preparations for retiring for the night, was conscious of that queer sensation of unimagined and impalpable danger.

CHAPTER XX.

LOST IN LONDON.

Quest, notwithstanding the unusual nature of his surroundings, slept that night as only a tired and healthy man can. He was awakened the next morning by the quiet movements of a manservant who had brought back his clothes carefully brushed and pressed.

"Breakfast is served at nine o'clock, sir. It is now half-past eight."

"I'll be right there."

The man withdrew and Quest made a brisk toilet. The nameless fears of the previous night had altogether disappeared. At the last moment he stretched out his hand to take a handkerchief from his satchel. A sudden exclamation broke from his lips. He stood for a moment as though turned to stone. Before him, on the top of the little pile of white cambric, was a small black box! With a movement of the fingers which was almost mechanical, he removed the lid and drew out the customary little scrap of paper. He smoothed it out before him on the dressing case and read the message:

"You will fail here as you have failed before. Better go back. There is more danger for you in this country than you dream of."

His teeth came fiercely together and his hands were clenched. His thoughts had gone like a flash to Lenora. Was it possible that harm was intended for her? He put the idea away from him almost as soon as conceived. The thing was unimaginable. Craig was here, must be here, in the close vicinity of the house.

The atmosphere of the pleasant breakfast room to which in due course he descended, was cheerful enough. Lady Ashleigh had already taken her place at the head of the table.

She touched an electric bell under her foot and a moment or two later the butler appeared.

"Go up and see how long your master will be?" Lady Ashleigh directed.

"Very good, your ladyship."

The man was backing through the doorway in his usual dignified manner when he was suddenly pushed on one side. The valet who had waited upon Quest, and who was Lord Ashleigh's own servant, rushed into the room. He almost shouted to Lady Ashleigh:

"Your ladyship—the master! Something has happened! He won't move! He—he—"

They all trooped out of the room and up the stairs, the professor leading the way. They pushed open the door of Lord Ashleigh's bedroom. In the far corner of the large room was the four-poster, and underneath the clothes a silent figure. The professor turned down the sheets. Then he held out his hand. His face, too, was blanched.

"Julia, don't come," he begged.

"I must know," she almost shrieked.

"I must know!"

"George is dead," the professor said slowly.

There was a moment's awful silence, broken by a piercing scream from Lady Ashleigh. She sank down upon the sofa, and the professor leaned over her. Quest turned to the little group of frightened servants who were gathered round the doorway.

"Telephone for a doctor," he ordered; "also to the local police station."

"He, too, approached the bed and reverently lifted the covering. Lord Ashleigh was lying there, his body a little doubled up, his arms wide outstretched. On his throat were two black marks.

They had led Lady Ashleigh from the room. The professor and Quest stood face to face. The former's expression, however, had lost all his amiable serenity. His face was white and pinched.

"Quest! Quest!" he almost sobbed. "My brother!—George, whom I loved like nobody else on earth! Is he really dead?"

"Absolutely!"

The professor gripped the oak pillar of the bedstead. He seemed on the point of collapse.

"The mark of the Hands is upon his throat," Quest pointed out.

"The Hands! Oh, my God!" the professor groaned.

"We must not eat or drink or sleep," Quest declared, fiercely, "until we have brought this matter to an end. Craig must be found. This is the supreme horror of all."

The butler made an apologetic appearance. He spoke in a hushed whisper.

"You are wanted downstairs, gentlemen. Middleton, the head keeper, is there."

As though inspired with a common idea, both Quest and the professor hurried out of the room and down the broad stairs. Their inspiration was a true one. The gamekeeper welcomed them with a smile or triumph. By his side, the picture of abject misery, his clothes torn and muddy, was Craig!

"I've imagined this little job, sir," Middleton announced, with a smile of slow triumph.

"How did you get him?" Quest demanded.

"Little idea of my own," the gamekeeper continued. "I guessed pretty well what he'd be up to. He'd tumbled to it that the usual way off the moor was pretty well guarded, and he'd doubled back through the thin line of woods close to the house. I dug one of my poachers' pits, sir, and covered it over with a lot of loose stuff. That got him all right. When I went to look this morning I saw where he'd fallen through, and there he was, walking round and round at the bottom like a caged animal. Your servants have telephoned for the police, Mr. Ashleigh."

Quest suddenly whispered to the professor. Then he turned to the keeper.

"Bring him upstairs, Middleton, for a moment," he directed. "Follow us, please."

They passed into the bedroom. Quest signed to the keeper to bring Craig to the side of the four-poster. Then he drew down the sheet.

"Is that your work?" he asked, sternly.

Craig, up till then, had spoken no word. He had shambled to the bedside, a broken, yet, in a sense, a stolid figure. The sight of the dead man, however, seemed to galvanize him into sudden and awful vitality. He threw up his arms. His eyes were horrible as they glared at those small black marks. His lips moved backwards and forwards, helplessly at first. Then at last he spoke.

"Strangled!" he cried. "One more!"

"That is your work," the criminologist said, firmly.

Craig collapsed. He would have fallen bodily to the ground if Middleton's grip had not kept him up. Quest bent over him. It was clear that he had fainted. They led him from the room.

"We'd better lock him up until the police arrive," Quest suggested. "I suppose there is a safe place somewhere?"

The professor awoke from his stupor.

"Let me show you," he begged. "I know the way. We've a subterranean hiding place which no criminal on this earth could escape from."

They led him down to the back part of the house into a dry cellar which had the appearance of a prison cell.

"This place has been used before now, in the old days, for malefactors," the professor remarked. "He'll be safe there. Craig," he added, his voice trembling, "Craig—I—I can't speak to you. How could you!"

There was no answer. Craig's face was buried in his hands. They left him there and turned the key.

CHAPTER XXI.

Quest stood, frowning, upon the pavement, gazing at the obviously empty house. He looked once more at the slip of paper which Lenora had given him. There was no possibility of any mistake:

Mrs. Willet,
157 Elsmere Road,
Hampstead.

This was 157 and the house was empty. After a moment's hesitation he rang the bell at the adjoining door. A woman, who had been watching him from the front room, answered the summons at once.

"Can you tell me," he inquired, "what has become of the lady who used to live at 157—Mrs. Willet?"

"She's moved," was the uncompromising reply.

"Do you know where to?" Quest asked, eagerly.

"West Kensington—No. 17 Princess Court road. There was a young lady here yesterday afternoon inquiring for her."

Quest raised his hat. It was a relief, at any rate, to have news of Lenora.

"I am very much obliged to you, madam."

"You're welcome!" was the terse reply.

Quest gave a new address to the taxi driver and was scarcely able to restrain his impatience during the long drive. They pulled up at last before a somewhat dingy-looking house. He rang the bell, which was answered by a trim-looking little maid-servant.

"Is Mrs. Willet in?" he inquired.

The maid-servant stood on one side to let him pass. Almost at the same moment the door of the front room opened and a pleasant-looking elderly lady appeared.

"I am Mrs. Willet," she announced. "I am Mr. Quest," the criminologist told her quickly. "You may have heard your niece, Lenora, speak of me."

"Then perhaps you can tell me what has become of her?" Mrs. Willet observed.

"Isn't she here?"

Mrs. Willet shook her head.

"I had a telegram from her from Plymouth to say that she was coming, but I've seen nothing of her as yet."

"You've changed your address, you know," Quest reminded her, after a moment's reflection.

"I wrote and told her," Mrs. Willet began. "After all, though," she went on thoughtfully, "I am not sure whether she could have had the letter. But if she went up to Hampstead, anyone would tell her where I had moved to. There's no secret about me."

"Lenora did go up to 157 Elsmere road yesterday," Quest told her. "They gave her your address here, as they have just given it to me."

"Then what's become of the child?" Mrs. Willet demanded.

Quest, whose brain was working quickly, scribbled upon one of his cards the address of the hotel where he had taken rooms and passed it over.

To be continued.

RATE DECISION MAY COME SOON

Railroad Men Have Renewed Hope as Result of Finding Regarding Ohio Law

ASKS FIVE PERCENT INCREASE

Case is Pending Before Public Service Commission—Legislature Was Unfriendly

(By United Press.)

Indianapolis, Ind., June 8.—Railroad men here today agreed that their freight rates from the public service commission will come to a head sooner as a result of the recent repeal of the maximum freight rate laws in Ohio. The prediction has been made that the freight rates in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Western Pennsylvania will undergo a readjustment in the next three months.

Committees from the various railroads in the Central Freight Association will be called into conference soon to formulate new schedules. New schedules already have been formulated for Indiana and are filed with the public service commission, but the railroads have voluntarily postponed hearings on the schedules many times. Recently the seventh voluntarily postponement was taken until July 1.

M. R. Maxwell, general freight agent of the Lake Erie and Western, recently said that the maximum rate decision in Ohio would clear the way for an increase in Indiana. He said an attempt would be made to make the rates in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan uniform.

Although the recent legislature proved unfriendly to the plea of the railroads, the officials of the roads believe that they stand a good chance of getting from the public service commission the general five per cent increase that was recommended by the interstate commercial commission.

THE BEST PROOF

Given by a Rushville Citizen.

Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they brought benefit.

The story was told to Rushville residents.

Time has strengthened the evidence.

Has proven the result lasting.

The testimony is home testimony.

The proof convincing.

It can be investigated by Rushville residents.

Harrison Levi, 931 N. Sexton St., Rushville, Ind., says: "I had to get up several times at night to pass the kidney secretions, which were sometimes attended with pain. I had severe backaches, too. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at Johnson & Co.'s Drug Store and it did not take them long to make me well. The pains left and the action of my kidneys became regular.

(Statement given June, 1910).

MANY GO FOR THE E. L. CONVENTION

Twenty-fifth Annual Meeting of Con-nersville District Opens at Shelbyville Today.

DR. TEVIS IS SUPERINTENDENT

About One Hundred Delegates Are Expected to be Present—
Closes Wednesday Night.

Many from here went to Shelbyville today to attend the twenty-fifth annual convention of Epworth Leagues of the Connersville district. The league meeting was to be held in the West Street M. E. church. Dr. V. W. Tevis of this city is the district superintendent and will have an important part in the program. About one hundred delegates will be present.

At four o'clock this afternoon the council of the district officers was to be held. At six o'clock evening mess will be served in the dining room at the church. At seven-thirty the following bugle notes will be heard: "The Educational Note," Harry Andrews Kings, D. D.; "The Temperance Note," E. S. Shumaker, D. D.

On Wednesday morning the conference will open at six o'clock and will continue through the day until the conclusion of Rev. J. Stansfield's address on "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which will take place at seven-thirty Wednesday night.

The present officers of the district are—President, Rev. J. T. Scull, College Corner, Ohio; vice-presidents, Henry Knoll, Connersville; Mrs. Rosanna Klipple, Brookville; Miss Mabel English, Shelbyville, and Carrie Roark, Milton; secretary, Opal Lorraine Smith, College Corner, Ohio; treasurer, Ophir Klipple, Brookville. Miss Ida Bottles of Connersville is the district superintendent of the junior department.

BOARD TO EQUALIZE ALL ASSESSMENTS

Taking up Property on Main Street
First and Then Will go Over
Other Streets Here.

MANY INTERESTING PROTESTS

The board of review was still considering the assessments of real estate on Main street today. Many persons living on this street have appeared before the board and an effort is being made to equalize the assessments.

The board intends to take up the assessments on every street in the city the first thing and will equalize the assessments by streets. People from other streets appeared before the board this morning but were told to come back later after the board had finished with Main street. Nothing definite has been done although the board is pretty well satisfied as to the assessments being raised, but whether they are equal or not is the question to be determined.

APPOINTMENT CAUSES A MESS

Lucrative Position Landed by John
J. Keegan Recalls Democratic Organization is Left Out

NEVER CONSIDERED AT ALL

Wilson And Kern Are Picking "Forward Lookers" Which Does Not "Set" Very Well.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 8.—Another lovely rumpus has developed in the ranks of Indiana Democracy over the appointment of John J. Keegan of Indianapolis to the position of collector of internal revenue for Porto Rico. Some of leaders of the regular or Taggart faction of the party have about come to the conclusion that any plums Wilson, Bryan or Kern have for distribution will go to the "forward lookers" and not to anyone actively identified with the reigning organization. It is said that the appointment of Keegan was especially resented by active Marion county workers.

A look backward reveals the fact that the Wilson administration has been anything but kind to "the boys" in Indiana. They have sat helpless and disgusted and watched the juicy plums fall into the laps of men who have never been known for their enthusiasm and activity in the regular party organization. "Insurgents" seem to have met with the greatest favor from Wilson, Kern and their political advisors. There was Larry Becker of Hammond! He seems to have had "class" as a "forward looker" but there was no great rush in organization circles to land a remunerative federal appointment office for him, but notwithstanding this fact Mr. Becker is now holding down a very attractive job in Washington, thanks to the favor of Wilson and Kern. Then there was the case of George Downey, who was made comptroller in face of the fact that another man carried the unanimous endorsement of the present Democratic organization in Indiana. Then again there was the case of Reginald Sullivan of Marion county when Taggart and his whole organization indorsed for appointment as district attorney for Indiana but it is now history that he did land, the place going to a man who had not been noted for his activity in behalf of the party organization.

There are numerous other instances where the organization got the "go by" from Wilson and Kern. It is generally admitted that the present lack of enthusiasm and ginger on the part of the Democratic organization in the state is due to the hostile attitude that the national administration has assumed towards the Taggart faction of Indiana democracy. Those strained relations between the state and national administration over patronage are expected to increase the bitterness of the struggle between the Taggart and anti-Taggart forces that are expected to develop in every district in the state when the matter of reorganizing the state committee is taken up.

HALL'S DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL

Coroner in Verdict Found That he
Was Killed While Trespassing
on Railroad

RUMORS WERE UNFOUNDED

Testimony of Girl Showed That he
Instead of Nine O'clock

Coroner Barnett was unable to find any grounds for rumors of foul play in the death of Charles Hall, of near Milroy, whose mangled remains were found along the Big Four tracks, two miles south of Milroy last Friday morning.

The coroner filed his verdict this afternoon finding that he "came to his death on the morning of June 4, 1915 at about 12:20 a. m. while he was trespassing along the right-of-way of the Big Four railroad at a point 150 feet north of 'Foley's Crossing,' two miles south of Milroy and one mile north of Williams-town. Death was due to being struck by a Big Four freight train No. 95 and was accidental."

It will be recalled that following the finding of Hall's body rumors were thick in Milroy that the death was not altogether accidental and an effort was made to create a mystery. The coroner states in his verdict that death was accidental and finds no grounds for suspicion.

Hall had been to see Miss Roxie Fishback at Williamstown and it was first reported that he had left there about nine o'clock. The watch found on his person had stopped at 1:35 o'clock and as there were several hours that could not be accounted for, rumors of foul play started.

According to the testimony of Miss Fishback, Hall did not leave there until 11 o'clock on the night of June 3, instead of nine o'clock as had been rumored. She told the coroner that he came there about four-thirty o'clock in the evening and remained until eleven o'clock that night. She also stated that she had been with young Hall while he was under the influence of liquor and it was not generally known around Milroy that he ever drank.

GEN. TRABUE WILL CANVAS THE VOTE

Election of Brigadier General Will Take Place on June 15, According to Orders.

GRAY IS AGAIN A CANDIDATE

General Samuel L. Trabue of this city, Col. Harry Wade and Frank Shellhouse of Indianapolis have been appointed as members of the canvassing board to canvass the vote on the election of brigadier general, commanding the Indiana brigade of the Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias.

The commission of General William B. Gray, of Covington, has expired by limitation and General G. H. Loomis of Grand Rapids, Mich., has ordered an election to be held on June 15. The vote will be taken by mail and the time limit is June 15. It is expected that Gen. Gray will be re-elected as there appears to be no opposition to his candidacy.

Greensburg News Comments on Newspaper Contests.

Commenting on the recent law suit brought against the owner of the Rushville American and comparing it with a similar transaction in Greensburg, the Greensburg News says:

Rushville seems to be higher priced for winning prizes in newspaper voting contests than Greensburg. The complaint filed in the Rushville American contest alleges that the winner gave a check for $75. One put on here in which a suit was threatened, but compromised, the check was said to be only for $65, so they come $10 higher in Rush.

NEWMAN BOY SENT TO PLAINFIELD

Entered Plea of Guilty to Burglary
Charge And Sentenced to
Boys' School

BROKE INTO WILSON STORE

Sheriff Cavitt left this morning Sheriff Cavitt will leave in the morning for Plainfield with Guy Newman, 14 years old, son of John Newman, who was found in the Frank Wilson clothing store late Sunday afternoon.

Young Newman was arraigned before Judge Sparks late yesterday and entered a plea of guilty to the charge of burglary and was immediately sentenced by the court. The case did not go through the regular channels of the juvenile court by reason of the fact that the boy pleaded guilty and this was not necessary. Judge Sparks sent him to the boys school at Plainfield to remain until he was twenty-one years old or until further order of the court. Young Newman took his sentence in an easy manner and said that since he was guilty he was anxious to begin the sentence.

950 LEFT HERE ON EXCURSION TRAIN

Attendance Alone Should Make
Picnic at Cincinnati Zoo a
Success—Eleven Coaches.

WILL MEET WINCHESTER, KY.

As far as crowd is concerned the picnic of the Main Street Christian church Sunday school and the Winchester, Ky., Sunday school at the Zoo in Cincinnati today should be a great success. A total of 950 tickets were sold for the excursion train that left here this morning at seven o'clock. The train was packed to the guards, and the eleven cars were all filled.

The number making the trip came up to the expectations of the committee in charge. Of the 950 making the trip many were from the country and began arriving here at an early hour this morning. The special train from Winchester will arrive at about the same hour and all who intended going to the zoo would find sufficient cars awaiting at the depots.

CASEY PAROLE RECEIVED HERE

But he is Still in Jail Because Court
is Out of City—Associating
Charge Not Mentioned.

SOME MISUNDERSTANDING

Governor Does Not Take This Into Consideration and he May Have to Serve More Time.

Newton Casey, who was yesterday paroled by Governor Ralston, acting on a petition filed there, was still in jail today because Judge Sparks was out of the city. The parole is in the hands of Clerk Taylor and it is expected Casey will be released tomorrow after being arraigned before the court and the provisions of the parole read to him. The parole is very strict and Casey will have to lead the "straight and narrow" if he is to escape serving the remainder of the sentence.

The parole of the governor does not exactly correspond with the petition as sent in. The order does not mention a thing about the associating charge against Casey and the figures of the jail sentence do not correspond with those given on the criminal docket. He was fined $290 and given 110 days in jail on the blind tiger charge and $90 fine and 60 days in jail for associating. According to the parole Casey has served 85 days in jail and this would not cover the fine and costs on either of the charges. The governor also states that Hon. Will M. Sparks signed the petition, which Judge Sparks did not do. The court recommended that if he was going to be turned out of jail that he be given a parole so that he would have some strings to him. The order of the governor is not altogether clear here.

The order of the governor is as follows:

Whereas—"One Newton Casey was convicted in the circuit court of Rush county, Indiana, on the charge of selling intoxicating liquor without a license and sentenced to a term of 120 days in jail to which was added a fine of $380 and costs and,

Whereas, It is made to appear that said Newton Casey has served 85 days of said sentence; and,

Whereas, It is further made to appear by written report of examination by Drs. H. V. Logan, J. T. Paxton and Lowell M. Green, reputable physicians of Rush county, Indiana, that said Newton Casey is suffering from an injury, at which time some ribs were broken and also the ankle joint, and that lack of exercise and the confinement in his present condition will likely cause him to become a permanent cripple; and,

Whereas, It is further made to appear that said Casey has no means with which to pay said fine, and has two small children dependent upon him for support, and,

Whereas, Hon. Will M. Sparks, the trial judge, Hon. Albert C. Stevens, the prosecuting attorney, the auditor, the treasurer and county attorney of said county, together with the physicians above mentioned and the Hon. James E. Watson and Charles A. Frazee of Rush county recommend that said fine be remitted and said Casey be granted a parole;

Now therefore I Samuel L. Ralston, governor of the state of Indiana by virtue of the power and authority invested in me by the constitution and laws of said state hereby remit said fine assessed against said Newton Casey, grant him a parole, upon condition that he

JUST BACK FROM BATTLE FIELDS

Peter MacQueen, Noted Lecturer,
Coming to Chautauqua, Will Give
First Hand War Information.

HE IS A NOTED TRAVELER

First Went to War Zone in 1914 and Joined Allies Army and Witnessed Many Conflicts.

First hand information of the European war may be obtained by patrons of the Rush county chautauqua, when it is held here in August, from the lips of Peter MacQueen, F. R. G. S., who will present "Travelogues in Color" on "The Great European War" and "The New South America."

Mr. MacQueen sailed in August, 1914, to represent Leslie's Weekly and other journals in the war territory. He came back to the United States during the last winter, but he returned last spring to gain more information of the great struggle and to take some actual scenes of the mammoth conflict.

On his first trip, Mr. MacQueen joined the army of the allies. He has had many war experiences, but these new ones have been by far the most thrilling and terrible. "Words," he writes, "fail to give the remotest idea of the wickedness and wasteful terror that today deluge the green fields of Europe in rivers of fratricidal blood."

He has made pictures on the battlefields and amid the red ruins of the villages and towns of Belgium, France and Germany. In addition to his own pictures there will also be included in this lecture, pictures made by other war correspondents and the well known and daring photographers, Underwood and Underwood.

No other man in America has the peculiar qualifications of Mr. MacQueen to see and describe this nightmare of horror—this theatre and museum of things magnificent and grand, called the "Great European War." Mr. MacQueen will discuss the causes, conditions and consequences of this most stupendous war in history.

Peter MacQueen has traveled in many lands and is counted the man of most familiar with a greater number of countries than any other explorer of note. He has a lecture on "The New South America," which consists of one hundred and fifty beautiful scenes from Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Rio Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Santiago and Valparaiso.

He also has a comprehensive illustrated lecture on "Mexico, Past and Present," and one on "The A. B. C. Republics of South America." Mr. MacQueen, in addition, has views of the Panama canal and the exposition and a lecture, illustrated, on "In Wildest Africa."

Loredo, Texas, June 8.—The first sign of Mexican dissatisfaction with President Wilson's new Mexico policy cropped out at Nuevo Loredo last night during a jubilation of Carranzistas over the Leon victory.

"Mexico for Mexicans," shouted one of the military leaders at the end of a speech.

"President Wilson's policies are not needed in Mexico. Carranza is able to handle the Mexican affairs."

The crowd greeted the remarks with wild cheers. Other speakers followed in a similar vein.

MAPLE-JOHNSON SUIT HEARD TODAY

Case Involving $45 Tried For
Second Time Before A. J. Ross
And a Jury in Circuit Court

DISAGREEMENT FIRST TIME

The account suit of Clell Maple against Lafayette Johnson, in which $45 is demanded, was being tried for the second time today in the circuit court. A. J. Ross, of Andersonville presided as judge and the case was heard by a jury. The first time the jury failed to agree.

The defense started introducing evidence this afternoon after the court had overruled a motion for the court to instruct the jury to return a verdict for the defendant. Maple alleges that Johnson owes him $45 for training a horse. The costs in the suit are already greater than the amount demanded.

The jury was as follows: W. P. King, Jesse P. Bales, Willard Myers, Claude Guffin, Charles E. Hall, A. M. Hodge, Dan Kinney, D. C. Aldridge, Lewis Hendrix, J. E. Wynn, William Fisher and C. M. Wagoner.

CABINET NOT UNANIMOUS

Secretary Bryan Determined to Fight
for Modification of U. S. Note
to Germany.

IT WILL BE SENT TOMORROW

If he Should Refuse to Sign it, His Retirement from Cabinet Seems
Very Certain.

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN.
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, June 8.—President Wilson caused the announcement at 1:15 this afternoon that the German note was not complete. Through Secretary Tumulty he let it be known that he hoped it would go forward tomorrow.

But his cabinet was not unanimous in its approval of the document. And the man whose name it will bear, Secretary of State Bryan, left the cabinet meeting determined to fight for a modification right up to the very last minute.

Bryan believes the United States is so firmly on record for arbitration as to make it a mockery to send Germany a document which savors of an ultimatum. Although the majority of the cabinet was against him today, he carried his persuasive powers from the cabinet meeting to the University club, where he and his fellow members had lunch.

The white house announcement given by Secretary Tumulty was as follows:

"The president asks me to say that the note was gone over and discussed and put in final shape and it is hoped that it will go forward tomorrow."

The Bryan position came as a complete surprise to the president. In previous notes the secretary has taken the position that the United States should invite arbitration. But in every instance he has stopped short of any further fight when the note had been approved by a majority of the cabinet. The president expected that he would do this today. Prior to the cabinet meeting it was understood from the president that the note would have the approval of all the members.

The first intimation that anything was wrong came when Bryan did not appear at the opening of the meeting. Inquiry at the White House disclosed that he had sent word that he was working over an important paper which had to be finished.

The secretary's messenger said Bryan would be busy for some time and could not come when the meeting opened.

Finally about twelve o'clock the secretary appeared. His face was

From Luxury to Necessity

A few years ago the automobile was a high priced luxury.

Today it is almost a necessity.

For the heavy work it is supplanting the horse. For quick travel it is supreme.

The automobile has a distinct service to render, but it would have never reached its present point of popularity under its own power.

Automobile manufacturers coupled up their product to the vigorous engine of newspaper advertising.

And as always happens the consumer quickly benefited, for as the uses of the automobile enlarged its cost decreased.

fleshed and his mouth set in a firm line. He swung into the cabinet room with a set stride of determination. For an hour the doors were closed then they opened with a bang. The cabinet members walked out but refused absolutely to talk. Secretary Bryan came last, his face still set, and beads of perspiration shown and his collar was wilted.

It is understood Bryan carried to the meeting a memorandum by which he justified his views that the proposed note was not of the character the United States should present.

Although Secretary Bryan will continue his efforts to obtain a modification of the note, those close to the president said they will be unavailing.

Should Bryan refuse to sign the note, it was admitted his retirement from the cabinet would be certain.

President Wilson this morning decided that any friction had occurred in the cabinet over the note although he said that all the members had made suggestions. He added, however, that he was satisfied that all including Secretary Bryan would be in accord when the note was finished.

A Bold Monarch.

Charles IX. of France was bold enough to interfere with the attire of the women of his realm. In 1561 he forbade the ladies to use any "bands of embroidery stitchings or fixings of silk, excepting only a bordering the width of a finger or at the most two borderings with chain stitchings."

HALL'S DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL

by the coroner is testimony from Dr. C. S. Houghland, Ira Fleetwood, M. J. Luty, William Hall the boy's father and a number of others. Mr. Hall told the coroner that he had not had any trouble with his son although he did object to the company he was keeping. Several witnesses stated that they had never heard of young Hall contemplating suicide and Coroner Barnett reached the decision that death was accidental.

Georgians of the Caucasus.

Though the Russians are the dominant race in the Caucasus, the aristocrats of the very mixed population of that region are the Georgians. A people of mysterious antecedents—their race, according to some ethnologists, being older even than the Egyptians—they stand upon a higher plane of civilization and culture than any of their neighbors. Formerly Georgia was an independent kingdom, and its people, converted to Christianity in the fourth century, have never relapsed into the Mohammedanism of the surrounding tribes. Their golden age was the twelfth century, in the days of the great Queen Tamara. Now there are no more kings in Georgia, but an amazing number of princes. It is a Russian joke that every Georgian, whatever his occupation, boasts a title. It might be added, with more truth, that every Georgian is a poet.—Fall Mall Gazette.

Reason and Instinct.

A certain north country miner was particularly proud of a clever little dog he possessed. At times he was apt to claim a little too much for his pet, and one morning a neighbor was endeavoring to point out the difference between instinct and reason when an amusing interruption occurred. A seedy looking tramp turned the corner, and the dog, without so much as a word from his master, sprang into the road and offered battle.

"There you are," laughed the miner as the dog snarled and snarled around the heels of the tramp. "E don't like the looks of the chap. That's instinct." Suddenly the tramp turned and kicked the dog into an adjacent field.

"There you are," ejaculated the miner's friend grimly. "The chap don't like the looks of the dog. An' that's reason."—London Tit-Bits.

A Priceless Idol.

It is a part of the creed of Mohammedans to smash the noses of all idols they may come across. When they invaded India they defaced in this way every Hindu god. A figure of Vishnu cut in green jade was buried in the bed of the Ganges during this invasion and is now preserved in a temple in Benares. It is the only perfect image left of all the old idols, and its sanctity is such that the priests at Allahabad have offered for it its weight in gold, together with two magnificent rubies, formerly the eyes of Buddha. But they cannot buy it.

Wasted Effort.

At a fire recently a brave fireman came gasping and panting from the burning building with his eyebrows singed in the flames. Under one arm he carried a small but heavy box, which he deposited in a place of safety with the air of a man who had saved a box of government bonds from destruction. On opening the box it was found to contain six bottles of a new patent fire extinguisher.—Argonaut.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush the Kidneys at once when Back-ache or Bladder bothers—Meat forms uric acid.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

It is understood that the selection of a "former Democrat" to succeed E. C. Toner, of Anderson, who recently resigned as chairman of what little is left of the Progressive state organization to join the Republican party, is not in the least displeasing to Tom Taggart and his political associates and schemers. However, this choice it is said, is not meeting with the approval of thousands of men who believe in a protective tariff who voted the Progressive ticket last year. The rush towards the Republican camp since the state chairman of the Progressive party resigned to become a Republican has been terrific. Other men who were prominent in the Progressive movement as late as last year, it is reported, are preparing to follow the lead of the state chairman and state secretary at an early date.

The Vigo County Colored Republican Club is preparing to hold a big demonstration in Terre Haute on June 22. The officers have secured the use of the armory, one of the largest auditoriums in Terre Haute for this meeting. Additions to its membership list are being made daily. The club has opened permanent headquarters and regular meetings are held on Friday night of each week.

Obituary.

Lena Ray Brookbank, daughter of Harrison and Rose Brookbank was born in Orange township - Rush County Indiana June 2 1882. She united with the M. E. Church at Gowdy in early life under the preaching of the Rev. Maupin. As she grew older she became stronger in the work and leaves a christian life on the pages of time.

She began teaching school when nineteen years of age in Orange township where she has taught for thirteen years. She was primary teacher at Moscow for nine years. The last day of her last school March 12th was the first day of her sickness from which she suffered much. During these long weeks of suffering she was tenderly and carefully attended by her mother and loving sisters and a faithful physician, but every possible means within the reach of human hands could not restore her health. She realized her condition and made all the necessary arrangements. She quietly passed away May, 24 aged 32 years, 11 months and 22 days. She leaves her mother, five sisters Mrs. J. T. Snell, Mrs. D. O. Alter, Mrs. James McDonald, and Miss Pearl, and one brother Ira, two half sisters Mrs. Frances Bennett, of Kokomo, and Mrs. Lewis Stark to mourn the irretrievable loss of an obedient daughter and loving sister, and a host of other relatives and friends who feel they have lost a dear one. Her kind words and winning smiles made many and lasting friendships.

Lena will be greatly missed in the schoolroom as in her home. Through all her pain at times she'd smile

A smile of heavenly birth
And when the angels called her home
She smiled farewell to earth
Heaven retaineth now our treasure,

Earth the lonely casket keeps
And the sunbeams love to finger
Where our loving sister sleeps
Tis' hard to break the tender cord
When love has bound the heart
Tis' hard, so hard, to speak the words,
We must forever part
Dearest loved one we must lay thee
In the peaceful grave's embrace
But thy memory shall be cherished
Until we see thy heavenly face

HEADING THE PROCESSION ON MEMORIAL DAY

By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

It was about a week before Memorial day a few years ago that one Horatio Sparrow, a resident of the village of Okemos, entered the drug store in that burg, looking as if he had something serious on his mind, and on being encouraged a little he said to the druggist:

"Doc, don't say nothin' to a livin' soul, but the town of Okemos is to be jarred from center to circumference this evenin'!"

"In what way?" was asked.
"Never you mind, but be at the post-office at 7 o'clock. Meanwhile get ready to feel the earth tremble!"
"Is it dynamite, Horatio?" was gasped.

"You be there and see!"
Horatio was a man that never got excited when he woke up in the morning and found a cow in his garden, and the druggist felt quite sure he had something big on hand. He must have told about fifty other people what he told him, for there was a big crowd at the postoffice at 7 o'clock in the evening, and all expected to hear big news. Deacon Holden took charge of things, as usual, and as the crowd got impatient he said:

"It is understood, feller citizens, that Horatio Sparrow is goin' to launch a thunderbolt here tonight, and it is with more than ordinary interest that I call the meetin' to order. Stand out, Horatio, and let's hear all about it."

Horatio stood out. He looked pale, but determined. He'd been thinking for a week of what he was going to say, and he started off as smooth as grease:

"The drums are beatin' a wild alarm. There is a wavin' of flags, a marchin' of men and a walkin' of women and children. War is upon the land. The life of the nation is at stake."

"By John, but that's flow'ry language!" exclaimed the deacon.

"Anything more, Horatio?"

"I just want to call your attention to the fact that Okemos has never had a Memorial day parade," replied the orator. "We hev never paraded and never decorated."

"By John, but that's a strong pint!" shouted the deacon. "Hang me if Horatio ain't knockin' things edgewise. No, sir; we've never had a parade nor decorated any graves, and we ought to be ashamed of ourselves. It is your suggestion that we celebrate the day this year, Horatio?"

"That's a pint, deacon."

"And it's as strong as a log chain. Yes, sir; we'll celebrate the day, and in order to make it a howlin' success I'll agree to take charge of the parade."

"But I object to that," said Horatio. "Hevin' originated this idea, I think it's far me to ride on horseback at the head of the procession."

There was a painful pause, and then Abner Jones, who was in fireman's uniform, jumped off the counter and said: "There shouldn't be no jealousy about this thing. Horatio would look purty fine on his spotted horse, and the deacon would be no slouch in his cocked hat, but if there's to be any feelin' over it I'll take the job off their hands. As I'm foreman of the fire company, it comes in my line anyhow."

"I don't propose to give up my right for nobody," said Horatio.

"And I'm thinkin' I'm the man to boss things," added the deacon.

"It appears to me," said Silas Lapham as he stood up and rubbed his hands together, "that we are not workin' in complete harmony in this matter. It will be the event of the century. Let us sacrifice any selfish interests as individuals and work to make the affair a general success."

"That's powerful good advice," said the deacon as he rapped on the stove with his cane—"powerful good. I alius stand ready to sacrifice, and I hope the rest of you do. Any further pint, Silas?"

"You can call it a pint or not," said Silas, "but belu' there seems to be a controversy here I think it better be settled by selectin' me to boss things."

"I'll never surrender my rights!" said Horatio Sparrow.

"Nor me!" added Deacon Holden.

"Nor me!" yelled Abner Jones.

It was evident that the meeting was on the point of breaking up in a row when Joe Richard came sauntering in as calmly as could be. The deacon saw him and called out:

"Feller patriots, before this meetin' breaks up in a row that will send the price of Okemos real estate down 50 per cent and put our civilizashun back fifty years let's hear what Joe Richard has to say about it."

"What's the question?" asked Joe. "About Memorial day. Shall we decorate?"

"Decorate what?"

"Why, the soldiers' graves."

"I don't see how you are goin' to do it," said Joe as he scratched his ear. "So far as I know or her bin able to find out nobody from Okemos went to war. It therefore follers that no Okemos man was ever killed. It follers, ag'in, that you might look the graveyard over for a month and not find a soldier's grave to decorate. 'Pears to me that you had better git yer grave fast."

Two minutes later Joe was the only man left in the postoffice. It was as he had said—there was nothing to decorate, and all the blowing had been for nothing.

DECISION ADDS TO BLUNDERS

Another Act is Placed in "The Comedy of Errors" as Played by Democratic Administration

FAVORS FOREIGN INTEREST

Court of Custom Appeals Declares

Five Per Cent Clause Includes

All Vessels

Washington, D. C., June 8.—The Court of Customs Appeals has just added another act to the comedy of errors in which the Democratic administration takes the star part.

The Court has rendered an opinion on the construction of the provision in the Underwood tariff law intended to give a 5 per cent discount in custom duties on merchandise imported in American vessels and has virtually declared that the effect of the provision gives a wholesale discrimination in favor of ships of foreign countries.

In a recent article attention was directed to this classic blunder then pending before the Customs Court. The slovenly methods by which it was enacted were referred to, showing that the Democrats had a vague idea about aiding American shipping, adopted a vague method of extending such aid, and by careless guess work had shown that during the debate in Congress Republicans had given repeated warnings that, apart from its policy, the phraseology of the five per cent section was meaningless and should be corrected to accomplish its purpose.

The decision of the Court of Customs Appeals completely confirms these statements, and rubs it in by saying:

"The wisdom or expediency of the policy is a matter into which we may not inquire nor have we the right to suspend the operation of the statute because we may think its purpose is not adequately accomplished."

It will be recalled that the language of the five percent discount section provided that "nothing herein shall be so construed as to abrogate or in any manner impair or affect the provisions of our treaties with foreign nations."

It appears from the opinion of the Customs Court that there are at least 5,500 treaty nation vessels in the American foreign trade, and that there are not over fifty American vessels. As a "favor" to our own ships the Democratic Congress, according to this decision, gave an EQUAL BOUNTY to 5,500 competing foreign vessels.

In its decision the Court referred to statistics showing that the discount provision reduces duties 5 per cent upon considerably more than one-half of all our dutiable imports. After all its labored adjustment of tariff rates the Democrats, in this single paragraph proposing a five per cent discount, practically destroyed the effect of all preceding schedules, and in the same breath conferred upon foreign ships a valuable privilege intended only for our own ships.

In harmony with the decision of the court of Customs Appeals there will be a refund of customs duties estimated at from twelve million to fifteen million dollars. Who gets the benefit of this refund? Eventually by far the larger part of it will find its way into the coffers of foreign manufacturers.

Unless the United States Supreme Court reverses the decision of the Court of Customs Appeals, these millions of dollars must come out of a treasury already facing a huge deficit resulting from gross mismanagement by the present administration.

SERVICE

Of the three essentials—strength, organization and service—afforded to clients of this Bank, SERVICE is not the least important.

The Bank's entire organization is permeated with the spirit of service. It is not enough to accept and safeguard the banking and trust business of clients; every effort is put forth to be of additional active service, within the Bank's proper sphere.

For example, the Bank, if appointed custodian of securities, will as agent sign ownership certificates required by the Federal Income Tax Law, collect dividends and coupons promptly as they mature, and either credit or remit the proceeds to the client; and will promptly notify him should any "rights" or other subscription privileges attach to the securities held.

Another example, clients are welcome to the Bank's facilities for investment and for investigating and analyzing the value of securities.

Many other examples of special service to clients might be mentioned, all of which would help to explain the rapid and substantial growth of this Bank's business.

OPENING GAMES WERE ALL FAST

Article of Ball as Displayed in Start of Indiana League Surely Should Please

CINCINNATI HERE SUNDAY

Team That Beat Richmond in Twelve Innings Will Be The Attraction Sunday.

If the class of ball as displayed in the Indiana State league Sunday can be taken as a criterion for the rest of the season the fans around the circuit will see some wonderful games. One twelve-inning game and one eleven-inning game is not so bad for a starter, and then Rushville's 3 to 1 victory over Connersville only added to the interest.

On next Sunday the league will be officially opened here. The Perkins-Campbell team under the leadership of Charles Becker, great favorite in the surrounding cities, will be the attraction. This is the team that defeated Richmond in 12 innings Sunday. From this the fans will see that the Rushers have no easy sailing and all of the games from now on will be hard ones.

The Rushville lineup appears to be all set for the rest of the season. Earl Hewitt, Rushville's great pitcher will be on the mound Sunday and the team behind him will be the same that defeated Connersville. The Rushers will exert themselves to the limit to maintain the lead in the league race and another great game is expected.

Since Sunday's win over Connersville, interest in the game here has been alive as it never was before and the possibilities of a championship team have aided in creating this interest as the fans have been shown that Rushville has a real ball team.

The club officials and Manager Davidson have always maintained that the team would travel behind good pitching and this has been proven. In Earl Hewitt the team has one of the best pitchers ever on the local field and the team behind him is giving the proper support.

Under the leadership of George Rohe the team is playing inside ball and will continue to do so. The league season here Sunday will be opened in an auspicious manner and one of the largest crowds of the season is expected as the interest is great and the fans are pulling for the team to stick in the lead in the league race.

There are several "ifs" connected with the game next Sunday that would put Rushville out in the lead all by its lonesome. The first one of these is, if Rushville beats Cincinnati. The second is for Connersville to beat Newcastle and the third for Cambridge City to beat Richmond. If all of this should happen then the Rushers would be in the lead with the rest trailing. It can be done as far as Rushville is concerned as the team is determined to win.

Rheumatism in Ankles

One Bottle of Rheuma Relieved Woman Who Could Not Walk.

Marvelous as this story may seem, it is absolutely true; but this is only one of the many almost magical cures that Rheuma is performing these days. Use of one bottle will convince any sufferer.

Mrs. Gertrude Kozel, Smithfield, Pa., writes: "I had rheumatism for over a year; it settled in my ankles and I could not walk. I have taken one bottle of Rheuma and do not have any more pain, and I can again walk at will."

Johnson's Drug Store and all druggists sell Rheuma for 50 cents. It is guaranteed to cure any case of any kind of rheumatism or money back.

Gratifying relief comes in a day, because Rheuma acts at one time on the kidneys, stomach, liver and blood, and starts to rid the entire system of poisonous uric acid at once. (Advertisement.)

PHILLIES STILL CLING AT TOP

Pat Moran's Team Causes Worry by Their Showing in the National League Race

NOT PROVING FLASH IN PAN

Great Brand of Hurling Has Proved Best Asset to Club—Infield Well Balanced.

BY BARRY FARIS
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)
New York, June 8.—The dogged persistence with which Pat Moran's Phillies cling around the top of the National league is beginning to cause much worry in various other camps in President Tener's circuit. When the Quakertown crew got away in a mad rush at the opening of the season most of the "wise" ones laughed. "Just a flash," they said. "They won't stay up there long."

The flash, however, hasn't shown many healthy signs of sputtering out. The Cubs spurred by them once in May for a short time, but Moran's men battered their way back again. The Cubs, by the way, on their first eastern invasion, cleaned up everywhere but at Philadelphia. The Phillies turned them back neatly in their efforts to dislodge the league leaders.

Fans are now giving the Quakertown crew a closer inspection than they have heretofore this season. Even yet the Phillies are not regarded seriously as pennant contenders. Few think that they have the stamina that will be required when the race gets hot in mid-summer. Charles Ebbetts, owners of the Dodgers, who are threatening the leaders this year, was quoted as saying that New York and Boston were the only teams his club had to beat out for the pennant. Roger Bresnahan, pilot of the Cubs, picked the same two as the ones he feared. Neither of these pilots took much notice of the Phillies into consideration. As yet neither the Giants or the Braves have got to going.

The great brand of hurling that his club has been blessed with is the biggest factor in Moran's success. Grover Cleveland Alexander, sometimes known as Alexander the Great, has been exhibiting the best brand of twirling seen in either league this season. Always a great pitcher, he has outdone himself this season. He has had few off days and he has chalked up many victories.

Alexander hasn't been the only winning pitcher, however. Mayer has been traveling along at a clip only slightly slower. Chalmers, turned back by the Giants after the training season, has been going great guns. Al Demaree, the cartoonist-flinger, shows signs of repeating his good work with the Giants two years ago.

The Phillies' infield is well balanced. Luderus at first and Bobby Byrne, ex-Pirate at third, are playing bang-up ball and steadying two younger players on the infield. Bert Neihoff, at second, has been playing ball a long time but has had little major league experience. This year he is rated high. Baneroff, at short, is playing sensational ball.

Dode Puskert, Beals Becker, and Gabby Cravath form the regular outer garden. All are slugging the ball. Cravath's home runs are almost a daily feature.

FRENCH MAKING STEADY ADVANCES

Germans Unsuccessful in Attempts to Check Them in Region Near The Arras

TRENCHES FILLED WITH DEAD

(By United Press.)
Paris, July 8.—Pressing steadily eastward towards Lens, the French have occupied another group of houses east of the Souchez sugar mill by daring bayonet dashes. Everywhere north of the region near the Arras the enemy are making unsuccessful attempts to stop the French advance.

An official statement issued from the war office this afternoon stated that the French had made slight progress on the slope of the Lorette. The Germans counter attacked three times during the night but were beaten off.

The fighting around Laville and the "labyrinth" is piling ruined trenches with dead and wounded.

CLASS GIVES RECITAL

A demonstration of the Dunning system by Mrs. Will Meredith's music class was given at her home, 516 North Morgan street, yesterday afternoon. She was assisted by Mrs. Irving Blue of Indianapolis, who is one of the leading teachers of that city.

E. PHILIPS OPPENHEIM

Novellized from the Photo Play of the Same Name. Produced by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

The carriage drew up before the great front a moment or two later. Lord Ashleigh came forward with outstretched hands, the genial smile of the welcoming host upon his lips. In his manner, however, there was a distinct note of anxiety.

"Edgar, my dear fellow," he exclaimed, "I am delighted! Welcome back to your home! Mr. Quest, I am very happy to see you here. You have heard the news, of course?"

"We have heard nothing," the professor replied.

"You didn't go to Scotland Yard?" Lord Ashleigh asked.

"We haven't been to London at all," Quest explained. "We got on the boat train at Plymouth, and your brother managed to induce one of the directors whom he saw on the platform to stop the train for us at Hamblin road. We only left the boat two hours ago. There's nothing wrong with Craig, is there?"

Lord Ashleigh motioned them to follow him.

"Please come this way," he invited. He led them across the hall—which, dimly lit and with its stained-glass windows, was almost like the nave of a cathedral—into the library beyond. He closed the door and turned around.

"I have bad news for you both," he announced. "Craig has escaped."

Neither the professor nor Quest betrayed any unusual surprise. So far as the latter was concerned, his first glimpse at Lord Ashleigh's face had warned him of what was coming.

"Dear me!" the professor murmured, sinking into an easy chair. "This is most unexpected!"

"We'll get him again," Quest declared quickly. "Can you let us have the particulars of his escape, Lord Ashleigh? The sooner we get the hang of things the better."

"You know, of course," he began. "That Craig was arrested at Liverpool in consequence of communications from the New York police. I understand that it was with great difficulty he was discovered, and it is quite clear that someone on the ship had been heavily bribed. However, he was arrested, brought to London, and then down here for purposes of identification. I would have gone to London myself, and, in fact, offered to do so, but on the other hand, as there are many others on the estate to whom he belonged from a place a little farther behind those trees, then stepped boldly into the middle of the water, waded down to that spot where, as you see, the trees hang over, stood stock still and leaned them all around him. It was dusk when the chase reached the river bank, and I have no doubt the burushes presented quite a natural appearance. At any rate, although the dogs came without a check to the edge of the river, where he stepped off, they never picked the scent up again either on this side or the other. We tried them for four or five hours before we took them home. The next morning, while the place was being thoroughly searched, we came upon the spot where these burushes had been cut down, and we found them caught in the low boughs of a tree, drifting down the river."

Quest had lit a fresh cigar and was smoking vigorously.

"What astonishes me more than anything," he pronounced, as he stood looking over the desolate expanse of country, "is that when one comes face to face with the fellow he presents all the appearance of a nervous and broken-down coward. Then all of a sudden there spring up these evidences of the most amazing, the most diabolical resource. . . . Who's this, Lord Ashleigh?"

The latter turned his head. An elderly man in a brown velvet suit, with gaiters and thick boots, raised his hat respectfully.

"This is my head keeper, Middleton," his master explained. "He was with us on the chase."

The professor shook hands heartily with the newcomer.

"Not a day older, Middleton!" he exclaimed. "So you are the man who has given us all this trouble, eh? This gentleman and I have come over from New York on purpose to lay hands on Craig."

"I am very sorry, sir," the man replied. "I wouldn't have fired my gun if I had known what the consequences were going to be, but then poaching devils that come round here rabbiting fairly send me furious, and that's a fact. It ain't that one grudge them a few rabbits, but my tame pheasants all run out here from the home wood, and I've seen feathers at the side of the road there that no fox nor stoat had nothing to do with. All the same, sir, I'm very sorry," he added, "to have been the cause of any inconvenience."

"It is rather worse than inconvenience, Middleton," the professor said, gravely. "The man who has escaped is one of the worst criminals of these days."

"He won't get far, sir," the gamekeeper remarked, with a little smile. "It's a wild bit of country, this, and I admit that men might search it for weeks without finding anything, but those gentlemen from Scotland Yard, sir, if you'll excuse my making the remark, and hoping that this gentleman," he added, looking at Quest, "is in no way connected with them—well, they don't know everything, and that's a fact."

"This gentleman is from the United States," Lord Ashleigh reminded him, "so your criticism doesn't affect him. By the bye, Middleton, I heard this morning that you'd been airing your opinion down in the village. You seem to rather fancy yourself as a thief-catcher."

"I wouldn't go so far as that, my lord," the man replied, respectfully, "but still, I hope I may say that I've as much common sense as most people. You see, sir," he went on, turning to Quest, "the spots where he could emerge from the tract of country are pretty well guarded, and he'll be in a fine mess, when he does put in an appearance, to show himself upon a public road. Yet by this time I should say he must be nigh starved. Sooner or later he'll have to come out for food. I've a little scheme of my own, sir, I don't mind admitting," the man concluded, with a twinkle in his keen brown eyes. "I'm not giving it away. If I catch him for you, that's all that's wanted, I imagine, and we shan't be any the nearer to it for letting anyone into my little secret."

His master nodded.

"You shall have your rise out of the police, if you can, Middleton," he observed. "It seems queer, though, to believe that the fellow's still in hiding round here."

They made their way, single file, to the road and up to the house. Lord Ashleigh did his best to dispel a queer little sensation of uneasiness which seemed to have arisen in the minds of all of them.

"Come," he said, "we must put aside our disappointment for the present, and remember that after all the chances are that Craig will never make his escape alive. Let us forget him for a little while. . . . Mr. Quest," he added, a few minutes later, as they reached the hall, "Moreton here will show you your room and look after you. Please let me know if you will take an apéritif. I can recommend my sherry. We dine at eight o'clock. Edgar, you know your way. The blue room, of course. I am coming up with you myself. Her ladyship back yet, Moreton?"

"Not yet, my lord."

"Lady Ashleigh," her husband explained, "has gone to the other side of the county to open a bazaar. She is looking forward to the pleasure of welcoming you at dinner time."

Dinner, served, out of compliment to their transatlantic visitor, in the great banquet hall, was to Quest, especially, a most impressive meal. They sat at a small round table lit by shaded lights, in the center of an apartment which was large in reality, and which seemed vast by reason of the shadows which hovered around the unlit spaces. From the walls frowned down a long succession of family portraits—Ashleighs in the queer Tudor costume of Henry VII; Ashleighs in chain armor, sword in hand, a charger waiting, regardless of perspective, in the near distance; Ashleighs befrilled and bejeweled; Ashleighs in the court dress of the Georges—judges, sailors, statesmen and soldiers. A collection of armor which would have gladdened the eye of many an antiquarian, was ranged along the black-paneled walls. Everything was in harmony, even the grave precision of the solemn-faced butler and the powdered hair of the two footmen. Quest, perhaps for the first time in his life, felt almost lost, hopelessly out of touch with his surroundings, and a struggling figure. Nevertheless, he entertained the little party with many stories. He struggled all the time against that queer sense of anachronism which now and then became almost oppressive.

The professor's pleasure at finding himself once more amongst these familiar surroundings was obvious and intense. The conversation between him and his brother never flagged. There were tenants and neighbors to be asked after, matters concerning the estate on which he demanded information. Even the very servants' names he remembered.

"It was a queer turn of fate, George," he declared, as he held out before him a wonderfully chased glass filled with amber wine, "which sent you into the world a few seconds before me and made you Lord Ashleigh and me a struggling scientific man."

"The world has benefited by it," Lord Ashleigh remarked, with more than fraternal courtesy. "We hear

Showing the Guest Through Hamblin House.

great things of you over here, Edgar. We hear that you have been on the point of proving most unpleasant things with regard to our origin."

"Oh! there is no doubt about that," the professor observed. "Where we came from and where we are going to are questions which no longer afford room for the slightest doubt to the really scientific mind. What sometimes does elude us is the nature of our tendencies while we are here on earth."

There was a brief silence. The port had been placed upon the table and coffee served. The servants, according to the custom of the house, had departed. The great apartment was empty. Even Quest was impressed by some peculiar significance in the long-drawn-out silence. He looked around him uneasily. The growing regard of that long line of painted warriors seemed somehow to be full of menace. There was something grim, too, in the sight of those empty suits of armor.

"I may be superstitious," Lord Ashleigh said, "but there are times, especially just lately, when I seem to find a new and hateful quality in silence. What is it, I wonder? I ask you, but I think I know. It is the conviction that there is some alien presence, something disturbing, lurking close at hand."

He suddenly rose to his feet, pushed his chair back and walked to the window, which opened level with the ground. He threw it up and listened. The others came over and joined him. There was nothing to be heard but the distant hooting of an owl, and farther away the barking of some farmhouse dog. Lord Ashleigh stood there with straining eyes, gazing out across the park.

"There was something here," he muttered; "something which has gone. What's that? Quest, your eyes are younger than mine. Can you see anything underneath that tree?"

Quest peered out into the gray darkness.

"I fancied I saw something moving in the shadow of that oak," he muttered. "Wait."

He crossed the terrace, swung down on to the path, across the lawn, over a wire fence and into the park itself. All the time he kept his eyes fixed on a certain spot. When at last he reached the tree there was nothing there. He looked all around him. He stood and listened for several moments. A more utterly peaceful night or more utter peace it would be hard to imagine. Slowly he made his way back to the house.

"I imagine we are all a little nervy tonight," he remarked. "There's nothing doing out there."

They strolled about for a hour or more, looking into different rooms, showing their guest the finest pictures, even taking him down into the wonderful cellars. They parted early, but Quest stood, for a few moments before retiring, gazing about him with an air almost of awe. His great room, as large as an Italian palace, was lit by a dozen wax candles in silver candlesticks. His four-poster was supported by pillars of black oak carved into strange forms, and surmounted by the Ashleigh coronet and coat-of-arms. He threw his windows open wide and stood for a moment looking out across the park, more clearly visible now by the light of the slowly rising moon. There was scarcely a breeze stirring, scarcely a sound even from the animal world. Nevertheless, Quest, too, as reluctantly he made his preparations for retiring for the night, was conscious of that queer sensation of unimagined and impalpable danger.

CHAPTER XX.

LOST IN LONDON.

Quest, notwithstanding the unusual nature of his surroundings, slept that night as only a tired and healthy man can. He was awakened the next morning by the quiet movements of a manservant who had brought back his clothes carefully brushed and pressed. "Breakfast is served at nine o'clock, sir. It is now half-past eight."

"I'll be right there."

The man withdrew and Quest made a brisk toilet. The nameless fears of the previous night had altogether disappeared. At the last moment he stretched out his hand to take a handkerchief from his satchel. A sudden exclamation broke from his lips. He stood for a moment as though turned to stone. Before him, on the top of the little pile of white cambric, was a small black box! With a movement of the fingers which was almost mechanical, he removed the lid and drew out the customary little scrap of paper. He smoothed it out before him on the dressing case and read the message:

"You will fall here as you have failed before. Better go back. There is more danger for you in this country than you dream of."

His teeth came fiercely together and his hands were clenched. His thoughts had gone like a flash to Lenora. Was it possible that harm was intended for her? He put the idea away from him almost as soon as conceived. The thing was unimaginable. Craig was here, must be here, in the close vicinity of the house.

The atmosphere of the pleasant breakfast room to which in due course he descended, was cheerful enough. Lady Ashleigh had already taken her place at the head of the table.

She touched an electric bell under her foot and a moment or two later the butler appeared.

"Go up and see how long your master will be?" Lady Ashleigh directed.

"Very good, your ladyship."

The man was backing through the doorway in his usual dignified manner when he was suddenly pushed on one side. The valet who had waited upon Quest, and who was Lord Ashleigh's own servant, rushed into the room. He almost shouted to Lady Ashleigh:

"Your ladyship—the master! Something has happened! He won't move! He—he—"

They all trooped out of the room and up the stairs, the professor leading the way. They pushed open the door of Lord Ashleigh's bedroom. In the far corner of the large room was the four-poster, and underneath the clothes a silent figure. The professor turned down the sheets. Then he held out his hand. His face, too, was blanched.

"Julia, don't come," he begged.

"I must know," she almost shrieked. "I must know!"

"George is dead," the professor said slowly.

There was a moment's awful silence, broken by a piercing scream from Lady Ashleigh. She sank down upon the sofa, and the professor leaned over her. Quest turned to the little group of frightened servants who were gathered round the doorway.

"Telephone for a doctor," he ordered; "also to the local police station."

"He, too, approached the bed and reverently lifted the covering. Lord Ashleigh was lying there, his body a little doubled up, his arms wide outstretched. On his throat were two black marks.

They had led Lady Ashleigh from the room. The professor and Quest stood face to face. The former's expression, however, had lost all his amiable serenity. His face was white and pinched.

"Quest! Quest!" he almost sobbed. "My brother!—George, whom I loved like nobody else on earth! Is he really dead?"

"Absolutely!"

The professor gripped the oak pillar of the bedstead. He seemed on the point of collapse.

"The mark of the Hands is upon his throat," Quest pointed out.

"The Hands! Oh, my God!" the professor groaned.

"We must not eat or drink or sleep," Quest declared, fiercely, "until we have brought this matter to an end. Craig must be found. This is the supreme horror of all."

The butler made an apologetic appearance. He spoke in a hushed whisper.

"You are wanted downstairs, gentlemen. Middleton, the head keeper, is there."

As though inspired with a common idea, both Quest and the professor hurried out of the room and down the broad stairs. Their inspiration was a true one. The gamekeeper welcomed them with a smile or triumph. By his side, the picture of abject misery, his clothes torn and muddy, was Craig!

"I've imagined this little job, sir," Middleton announced, with a smile of slow triumph.

"How did you get him?" Quest demanded.

"Little idea of my own," the gamekeeper continued. "I guessed pretty well what he'd be up to. He'd tumbled to it that the usual way off the moor was pretty well guarded, and he'd doubled back through the thin line of woods close to the house. I dug one of my poachers' pits, sir, and covered it over with a lot of loose stuff. That got him all right. When I went to look this morning I saw where he'd fallen through, and there he was, walking round and round at the bottom like a caged animal. Your servants have telephoned for the police, Mr. Ashleigh."

Quest suddenly whispered to the professor. Then he turned to the keeper.

"Bring him upstairs, Middleton, for a moment," he directed. "Follow us, please."

They passed into the bedchamber. Quest signed to the keeper to bring Craig to the side of the four-poster. Then he drew down the sheet.

"Is that your work?" he asked, sternly.

Craig, up till then, had spoken no word. He had shambled to the bedside, a broken, yet, in a sense, a stolid figure. The sight of the dead man, however, seemed to galvanize him into sudden and awful vitality. He threw up his arms. His eyes were horrible as they glared at those small black marks. His lips moved backwards and forwards, helplessly at first. Then at last he spoke.

"Strangled!" he cried. "One more!"

"That is your work," the criminologist said, firmly.

Craig collapsed. He would have fallen bodily to the ground if Middleton's grip had not kept him up. Quest bent over him. It was clear that he had fainted. They led him from the room.

"We'd better lock him up until the police arrive," Quest suggested. "I suppose there is a safe place somewhere?"

The professor awoke from his stupor.

"Let me show you," he begged. "I know the way. We've a subterranean hiding place which no criminal on this earth could escape from."

They led him down to the back part of the house into a dry cellar which had the appearance of a prison cell.

"This place has been used before now, in the old days, for malefactors," the professor remarked. "He'll be safe there. Craig," he added, his voice trembling, "Craig—I—I can't speak to you. How could you!"

There was no answer. Craig's face was buried in his hands. They left him there and turned the key.

CHAPTER XXI.

Quest stood, crowning, upon the pavement, gazing at the obviously empty house. He looked once more at the slip of paper which Lenora had given him. There was no possibility of any mistake:

Mrs. Willet,
157 Elmsmere Road,
Hampstead.

This was 157 and the house was empty. After a moment's hesitation he rang the bell at the adjoining door. A woman, who had been watching him from the front room, answered the summons at once.

"Can you tell me," he inquired, "what has become of the lady who used to live at 157—Mrs. Willet?"

"She's moved," was the uncompromising reply.

"Do you know where to?" Quest asked, eagerly.

"West Kensington—No. 17 Princess Court road. There was a young lady here yesterday afternoon inquiring for her."

Quest raised his hat. It was a relief, at any rate, to have news of Lenora. "I am very much obliged to you, madam."

"You're welcome!" was the terse reply.

Quest gave a new address to the taxi driver and was scarcely able to restrain his impatience during the long drive. They pulled up at last before a somewhat dingy-looking house. He rang the bell, which was answered by a trim-looking little maidservant.

"Is Mrs. Willet in?" he inquired.

The maidservant stood on one side to let him pass. Almost at the same moment the door of the front room opened and a pleasant-looking elderly lady appeared.

"I am Mrs. Willet," she announced. "I am Mr. Quest," the criminologist told her quickly. "You may have heard your niece, Lenora, speak of me."

"Then perhaps you can tell me what has become of her?" Mrs. Willet observed.

"Isn't she here?"

Mrs. Willet shook her head. "I had a telegram from her from Plymouth to say that she was coming, but I've seen nothing of her as yet."

"You've changed your address, you know," Quest reminded her, after a moment's reflection.

"I wrote and told her," Mrs. Willet began. "After all, though," she went on thoughtfully, "I am not sure whether she could have had the letter. But if she went up to Hampstead, anyone would tell her where I had moved to. There's no secret about me."

"Lenora did go up to 157 Elmsmere road yesterday," Quest told her. "They gave her your address here, as they have just given it to me."

"Then what's become of the child?" Mrs. Willet demanded.

Quest, whose brain was working quickly, scribbled upon one of his cards the address of the hotel where he had taken rooms and passed it over.

To be continued.

was well known, I thought that it would be better to have more evidence than mine alone. Accordingly, they left London one afternoon, and I sent a dogcart to the station to meet them. They arrived quite safely and started for here. Craig handcuffed to one of the Scotland Yard men on the back seat, and the other in front with the driver. About half a mile from the south entrance to the park the road runs across a rather desolate strip of country with a lot of low undergrowth on one side. We have had a little trouble with poachers there, as there is a sort of gypsy camp on some common land a little way away. My head keeper, to whom the very idea of a poacher is intolerable, was patrolling this ground himself that afternoon and caught sight of one of these gypsy fellows setting a trap. He chased him, and more, I am sure, to frighten him than anything else, when he saw that the fellow was getting away, he fired his gun, just as the dogcart was passing. The horse shied, the wheel caught a great stone by the side of the road, and all four men were thrown out. The man to whom Craig was handcuffed was stunned, but Craig member, no doubt, I have always kept a few bloodhounds in my kennels, and as soon as we could get together one or two of the keepers and a few of the local constabulary, we started off again from here. The dogs brought us without a check to this shed, and started off again this way."

They walked another half mile across a reedy swamp. Every now and then they had to jump across a small dyke, and once they had to make a detour to avoid an osier bed. They came at last to the river.

"Now, I can show you exactly how that fellow put us off the scent here," their guide proceeded. "He seems to have picked up something, Edgar, in those South American trips of yours, for a clever thing I never saw. You see all these burushes everywhere—clouds of them all along the river?"

"We call them tules," Quest muttered. "Well?"

"When Craig arrived here," Lord Ashleigh continued, "he must have heard the baying of the dogs in the distance and he knew that the game was up unless he could put them off the scent. He cut a quantity of these

"Come," he said, "we must put aside our disappointment for the present, and remember that after all the chances are that Craig will never make his escape alive. Let us forget him for a little while. . . . Mr. Quest," he added, a few minutes later, as they reached the hall, "Moreton here will show you your room and look after you. Please let me know if you will take an apéritif. I can recommend my sherry. We dine at eight o'clock. Edgar, you know your way. The blue room, of course. I am coming up with you myself. "Not yet, my lord."

"Lady Ashleigh," her husband explained, "has gone to the other side of the county to open a bazaar. She is looking forward to the pleasure of welcoming you at dinner time."

Dinner, served, out of compliment to their transatlantic visitor, in the great banquet hall, was to Quest, especially, a most impressive meal. They sat at a small round table lit by shaded lights, in the center of an apartment which was large in reality, and which seemed vast by reason of the shadows which hovered around the unlit spaces. From the walls frowned down a long succession of family portraits—Ashleighs in the queer Tudor costume of Henry VII; Ashleighs in chain armor, sword in hand, a charger waiting, regardless of perspective, in the near distance; Ashleighs befrilled and bejeweled; Ashleighs in the court dress of the Georges—judges, sailors, statesmen and soldiers. A collection of armor which would have gladdened the eye of many an antiquarian, was ranged along the black-paneled walls. Everything was in harmony, even the grave precision of the solemn-faced butler and the powdered hair of the two footmen. Quest, perhaps for the first time in his life, felt almost lost, hopelessly out of touch with his surroundings, and a struggling figure. Nevertheless, he entertained the little party with many stories. He struggled all the time against that queer sense of anachronism which now and then became almost oppressive.

The professor's pleasure at finding himself once more amongst these familiar surroundings was obvious and intense. The conversation between him and his brother never flagged. There were tenants and neighbors to be asked after, matters concerning the estate on which he demanded information. Even the very servants' names he remembered.

"It was a queer turn of fate, George," he declared, as he held out before him a wonderfully chased glass filled with amber wine, "which sent you into the world a few seconds before me and made you Lord Ashleigh and me a struggling scientific man."

"The world has benefited by it," Lord Ashleigh remarked, with more than fraternal courtesy. "We hear great things of you over here, Edgar. We hear that you have been on the point of proving most unpleasant things with regard to our origin."

"Oh! there is no doubt about that," the professor observed. "Where we came from and where we are going to are questions which no longer afford room for the slightest doubt to the really scientific mind. What sometimes does elude us is the nature of our tendencies while we are here on earth."

There was a brief silence. The port had been placed upon the table and coffee served. The servants, according to the custom of the house, had departed. The great apartment was empty. Even Quest was impressed by some peculiar significance in the long-drawn-out silence. He looked around him uneasily. The growing regard of that long line of painted warriors seemed somehow to be full of menace. There was something grim, too, in the sight of those empty suits of armor.

"I may be superstitious," Lord Ashleigh said, "but there are times, especially just lately, when I seem to find a new and hateful quality in silence. What is it, I wonder? I ask you, but I think I know. It is the conviction that there is some alien presence, something disturbing, lurking close at hand."

He suddenly rose to his feet, pushed his chair back and walked to the window, which opened level with the ground. He threw it up and listened. The others came over and joined him. There was nothing to be heard but the distant hooting of an owl, and farther away the barking of some farmhouse dog. Lord Ashleigh stood there with straining eyes, gazing out across the park.

"There was something here," he muttered; "something which has gone. What's that? Quest, your eyes are younger than mine. Can you see anything underneath that tree?"

Quest peered out into the gray darkness.

"I fancied I saw something moving in the shadow of that oak," he muttered. "Wait."

He crossed the terrace, swung down on to the path, across the lawn, over a wire fence and into the park itself. All the time he kept his eyes fixed on a certain spot. When at last he reached the tree there was nothing there. He looked all around him. He stood and listened for several moments. A more utterly peaceful night or more utter peace it would be hard to imagine. Slowly he made his way back to the house.

"I imagine we are all a little nervy tonight," he remarked. "There's nothing doing out there."

They strolled about for a hour or more, looking into different rooms, showing their guest the finest pictures, even taking him down into the wonderful cellars. They parted early, but Quest stood, for a few moments before retiring, gazing about him with an air almost of awe. His great room, as large as an Italian palace, was lit by a dozen wax candles in silver candlesticks. His four-poster was supported by pillars of black oak carved into strange forms, and surmounted by the Ashleigh coronet and coat-of-arms. He threw his windows open wide and stood for a moment looking out across the park, more clearly visible now by the light of the slowly rising moon. There was scarcely a breeze stirring, scarcely a sound even from the animal world. Nevertheless, Quest, too, as reluctantly he made his preparations for retiring for the night, was conscious of that queer sensation of unimagined and impalpable danger.

CHAPTER XX.

LOST IN LONDON.

Quest, notwithstanding the unusual nature of his surroundings, slept that night as only a tired and healthy man can. He was awakened the next morning by the quiet movements of a manservant who had brought back his clothes carefully brushed and pressed. "Breakfast is

RATE DECISION MAY COME SOON

Railroad Men Have Renewed Hope as Result of Finding Regarding Ohio Law

ASKS FIVE PERCENT INCREASE

Case is Pending Before Public Service Commission—Legislature Was Unfriendly

(By United Press.)

Indianapolis, Ind., June 8.—Railroad men here today agreed that their freight rates from the public service commission will come to a head sooner as a result of the recent repeal of the maximum freight rate laws in Ohio. The prediction has been made that the freight rates in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Western Pennsylvania will undergo a readjustment in the next three months.

Committees from the various railroads in the Central Freight Association will be called into conference soon to formulate new schedules. New schedules already have been formulated for Indiana and are filed with the public service commission, but the railroads have voluntarily postponed hearings on the schedules many times. Recently the seventh voluntarily postponement was taken until July 1.

M. R. Maxwell, general freight agent of the Lake Erie and Western, recently said that the maximum rate decision in Ohio would clear the way for an increase in Indiana. He said an attempt would be made to make the rates in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan uniform.

Although the recent legislature proved unfriendly to the plea of the railroads, the officials of the roads believe that they stand a good chance of getting from the public service commission the general five per cent increase that was recommended by the interstate commercial commission.

THE BEST PROOF

Given by a Rushville Citizen.

Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they brought benefit. The story was told to Rushville residents.

Time has strengthened the evidence. Has proven the result lasting. The testimony is home testimony. The proof convincing. It can be investigated by Rushville residents.

Harrison Levi, 931 N. Sexton St., Rushville, Ind., says: "I had to get up several times at night to pass the kidney secretions, which were sometimes attended with pain. I had severe backaches, too. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at Johnson & Co.'s Drug store and it did not take them long to make me well. The pains left and the action of my kidneys became regular."

(Statement given June, 1910). OVER TWO YEARS LATER, Mr. Levi said: "I am still free from kidney weakness, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Levi had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

MANY GO FOR THE E.L. CONVENTION

Twenty-fifth Annual Meeting of Connorsville District Opens at Shelbyville Today.

DR. TEVIS IS SUPERINTENDENT

About One Hundred Delegates Are Expected to be Present—Closes Wednesday Night.

Many from here went to Shelbyville today to attend the twenty-fifth annual convention of Epworth Leagues of the Connorsville district. The league meeting was to be held in the West Street M. E. church. Dr. V. W. Tevis of this city is the district superintendent and will have an important part on the program. About one hundred delegates will be present.

At four o'clock this afternoon the council of the district officers was to be held. At six o'clock evening mess will be served in the dining room at the church. At seven-thirty the following hymn notes will be heard: "The Educational Note," Harry Andrews Kings, D. D.; "The Temperance Note," E. S. Shumaker, D. D.

On Wednesday morning the conference will open at six o'clock and will continue through the day until the conclusion of Rev. J. Stansfield's address on "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," which will take place at seven-thirty Wednesday night.

The present officers of the district are—President, Rev. J. T. Scull, College Corner, Ohio; vice-president, Henry Knoll, Connorsville; Mrs. Rosanna Klipple, Brookville; Miss Mabel English, Shelbyville, and Carrie Roark, Milton; secretary, Opal Lorraine Smith, College Corner, Ohio; treasurer, Ophir Klipple, Brookville. Miss Ida Bottles of Connorsville is the district superintendent of the junior department.

BOARD TO EQUALIZE ALL ASSESSMENTS

Taking up Property on Main Street First and Then Will go Over Other Streets Here.

MANY INTERESTING PROTESTS

The board of review was still considering the assessments of real estate on Main street today. Many persons living on this street have appeared before the board and an effort is being made to equalize the assessments.

The board intends to take up the assessments on every street in the city the first thing and will equalize the assessments by streets. People from other streets appeared before the board this morning but were told to come back later after the board had finished with Main street. Nothing definite has been done although the board is pretty well satisfied as to the assessments being raised, but whether they are equal or not is the question to be determined.

APPOINTMENT CAUSES A MESS

Lucrative Position Landed by John J. Keegan Recalls Democratic Organization is Left Out NEVER CONSIDERED AT ALL

Wilson And Kern Are Picking "Forward Lookers" Which Does Not "Set" Very Well.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 8.—Another lovely rumpus has developed in the ranks of Indiana Democracy over the appointment of John J. Keegan of Indianapolis to the position of collector of internal revenue for Porto Rico. Some of leaders of the regular or Taggart faction of the party have about come to the conclusion that any plums Wilson, Bryan or Kern have for distribution will go to the "forward lookers" and not to anyone actively identified with the reigning organization. It is said that the appointment of Keegan was especially resented by active Marion county workers.

A look backward reveals the fact that the Wilson administration has been anything but kind to "the boys" in Indiana. They have sat helpless and disgusted and watched the juicy plums fall into the laps of men who have never been known for their enthusiasm and activity in the regular party organization. "Insurgents" seem to have met with the greatest favor from Wilson, Kern and their political advisors. There was Larry Becker of Hammond! He seems to have had "class" as a "forward looker" but there was no great rush in organization circles to land a remunerative federal appointment office for him, but notwithstanding this fact Mr. Becker is now holding down a very attractive job in Washington, thanks to the favor of Wilson and Kern. Then there was the case of George Downey, who was made comptroller in face of the fact that another man carried the unanimous endorsement of the present Democratic organization in Indiana. Then again there was the case of Reginald Sullivan of Marion county when Taggart and his whole organization endorsed for appointment as district attorney for Indiana but it is now history that he did land, the place going to a man who had not been noted for his activity in behalf of the party organization.

There are numerous other instances where the organization got the "go by" from Wilson and Kern. It is generally admitted that the present lack of enthusiasm and ginger on the part of the Democratic organization in the state is due to the hostile attitude that the national administration has assumed towards the Taggart faction of Indiana democracy. Those strained relations between the state and national administration over patronage are expected to increase the bitterness of the struggle between the Taggart and anti-Taggart forces that are expected to develop in every district in the state when the matter of reorganizing the state committee is taken up.
